Males With Eating Disorders:

Current Findings on Males with Eating Disorders Leigh Cohn,Raymond Lemberg,2013-06-26 The subgroup of males with eating disorders has been understudied and this book presents the most comprehensive look at this topic since Arnold Andersen edited the text Males with Eating Disorders in 1990 This monograph represents both original research and reviews of other studies based on a special issue of Eating Disorders The Journal of Treatment and Prevention with additional added chapters Representing international contributions from researchers and clinicians in nine countries this cross section includes chapters on etiology sociocultural and gender issues symptom presentation assessment medical and psychological concerns treatment recovery and prevention

Male Eating Disorders Russell Delderfield,2018-12-05 This book takes a novel approach to the study of male eating disorders an area that is often dominated by clinical discourses The study of eating disorders in men has purportedly suffered from a lack of dedicated attention to personal and socio cultural aspects Delderfield tackles this deficiency by spotlighting a set of personal accounts written by a group of men who have experiences of disordered eating The text presents critical interpretations that aim to situate these experiences in the social and cultural context in which these disorders occur This discursive work is underpinned by an eclectic scholarly engagement with social psychology and sociology literature around masculinities embodiment and fatness belonging punishment stigma and control leading to understandings about relationships with food body and self This is undertaken with a reflexive element as the personal intersects with the professional This text will appeal to students scholars and clinicians in social sciences humanities and healthcare studies including public health

Eating Disorders in Males Gary Elliott,2014-06-16 Seminar paper from the year 2010 in the subject Psychology Clinical Psychology Psychopathology Prevention Atlantic International University language English abstract It is generally accepted that eating disorders are a serious concern among women but we are faced with a severe lack of research into the prevalence of men struggling with their body image Sadly many doctors still do not recognize cases of eating disorders in men with the result that fewer than 5% of all referrals to specialist eating disorder clinics are male Morgan 2008 Pollack 1999 discovered that at Harvard Medical School there is increasing evidence that many men and probably boys too are becoming increasingly obsessed with their bodies Men are beginning to diet in unprecedented numbers with an estimated one million of them suffering from eating disorders Luciano 2002 This figure of one million is perceived to be understated as males with eating disorders are far too often under diagnosed Andersen et al 2000 confirms that eating disorders in males has been overlooked and in some treatment centres the ratio of men to women has changed over the past ten years from almost entirely women to 50 50 In Psychology Today magazine in 1997 an amazing 43% nearly half of the men in the survey reported that they were dissatisfied with their overall appearance Of those men surveyed 63% were dissatisfied with their abdomen 52% with their weight 55% with their muscle tone and 38% with their chest Pope et al 2000 There does not seem to be a specific age at which men develop eating disorders with sufferers as young as eight years old and eating disorders usually appearing around 14-25 years of age. Beat Children as young as two years old have already developed damaging eating habits; this can lead to eating disorders as the child ages. With 52-17% of eating disorders persisting into adulthood, Sancho et al (2007) and Morgan (2008) explain that eating disorders and body image problems develop slowly and subtly but once you start to use eating habits and exercise as a means of dealing with distressing emotions, then there may be a problem. In a Brief History of Eating Disorders (2009), we find that after puberty one million boys and men will have eating disorders, this coupled with Paterson's statement that on average it seems to be approximately six years before men or boys will seek help.

Gender, Power, and Body. Examining the Prevalence of Eating Disorders Among Males Donna Carrillo Lopez, 2017-01-18 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2016 in the subject Gender Studies grade A course Gastronomy language English abstract Over the past few decades of research and practice on eating disorders, there has been a severe lack of focus on the prevalence of these disorders among male populations. Given that an estimated 25-40% of males suffer from eating disorders, it is important for research and practice to adopt a nuanced understanding of how and why males are affected by these disorders. This paper provides an analytical lens for understanding the influence of gender and power dynamics in the occurrence of eating disorders among males. By exploring how gender and power manifest on the individual level to influence self-perception and body image, the hope is that this study may contribute to a more nuanced perspective of relevant issues and appropriate methods for prevention, diagnosis, and treatment.

Males With Eating Disorders Arnold E. Andersen, 2014-06-17 First published in 1990 The subject of anorexia nervosa and more recently bulimia nervosa in males has been a source of interest and controversy in the fields of psychiatry and medicine for more than 300 years. These disorders, sometimes called eating disorders, raise basic questions concerning the nature of abnormalities of the motivated behaviors: Are they subsets of more widely recognized illnesses such as mood disorders? Are they understandable by reference to underlying abnormalities of biochemistry or brain function? In what ways are they similar to, and in what ways do they differ from, anorexia nervosa and bulimia nervosa in females? This book will be of interest to a wide variety of people: physicians, psychologists, nurses, social workers, occupational therapists, nutritionists, educators, and all others who may be interested for personal or professional reasons.
