

Natural resource federalism: Preferences versus connectivity for patchy resources

Christopher Costello* and Daniel Kaffine†

Abstract

We examine the efficiency of centralized versus decentralized management of spatially-connected renewable resources when users have heterogeneous preferences for conservation vs. extraction. Resource mobility induces a spatial externality, while spatial preference heterogeneity drives a wedge between users' privately optimal extraction rates. We first address these market failures analytically and show that the first is most efficiently handled with centralized planning while the second is best tackled with decentralized management. Except in special cases, neither approach will be first best, but which arises as second best depends on the relative strength of preference heterogeneity versus spatial mobility of the resource. We illustrate the theory, and test its robustness, with a numerical example.

Keywords: renewable resources, federalism, spatial externalities, property rights

Natural Resource Revenues A Test Of Federalism:

Natural Resource Revenues Anthony Scott, 1976 Debate on the question of who should receive the surplus revenue generated by natural resource exploitation Ottawa or the provinces is usually carried on in terms of history politics custom law social values and environmental considerations This collection of essays presents analyses of the question from the economist's point of view The essays fall into three groups In the first of these the authors examine the taxation of the mining and energy industries and show how the method of taxation chosen by different levels of government federal or provincial may be non neutral distorting private output and timing decisions The second group consists of careful case studies of the effects of particular natural resource taxation measures the third focuses directly on the question of provincial and federal entitlement to resource revenues Although arguments are advanced for linking the right to tax to the responsibility for management and control at present vested in the provinces most of the contributors would agree that the provinces should be regarded as stewards and bailiffs not landlords as rent collectors and managers not rentiers and owners Handbook of Regional and Urban Economics P. Nijkamp, Edwin S. Mills, P. C. Cheshire, 1986 This second volume of the Handbook presents professional surveys of all the important topics in urban economics The first section contains 6 surveys on locational analysis the second 5 surveys of specific urban markets and the third part presents 5 surveys of government policy issues The book brings together exhaustive research by distinguished scholars from many countries It is the only complete survey volume of urban economics and should serve as a reference volume to scholars and graduate students for many years For more information on the Handbooks in Economics series please see our home page on <http://www.elsevier.nl/locate/hes>

Beigie, 2019-03-08 The combined efforts of the World Peace Foundation the C D Howe Research Institute and the Centre Quatre coins de Relations Internationales have culminated in a comprehensive three volume study of critical U S Canadian resource issues Motivated initially by the tensions of the mid 1970s and by U S concern about the actions of its major non energy resource supplier Canada the study grew to examine bilateral resource issues from a long term perspective The first volume traces the background of the U S Canadian resource connection analyzes the evolution of resource policies and processes in the two countries and introduces the domestic and bilateral policy issues that have emerged regarding natural resource development and trade Contributors examine the possibility that Canada might seek to exploit its resource position by taking actions detrimental to U S interests Volume II Patterns and Trends in Resource Supplies and Policies presents detailed case studies of nine specific resources of interest to both countries Volume III Perspectives Prospects and Policy Options examines the resource sector from the perspectives of corporate investors workers and environmentalists and concludes with a review of policy options and prospects for the bilateral relationship

Forming Economic Policy Fen Osler Hampson, 2013-11-07 How do governments make key decisions on vital economic questions of national importance Can they advance the national interest on issues that are highly politicized How do they respond to competing pressures from the international and domestic environments Forming Economic Policy explores these and other questions in Canada and Mexico two very different countries which share a common vulnerability to the world economy Using the case of energy the book argues that policymakers will address the national interest but only episodically with the onset of major national crises that invoke a higher and sustained sense of national priorities These crises are frequently induced by the interaction of domestic and foreign political and economic forces The conclusions are surprising Despite profound political and economic differences between these two countries policymakers have behaved in remarkably similar ways when arriving at key policy decisions The explanation which integrates two competing views of politics the pluralist and the statist has important implications with regard to the political processes in those states which like Canada and Mexico are exposed to the world economy and face problems of political legitimacy at home Forming Economic Policy will appeal to students and teachers of political economy and comparative politics as well as to those interested in the politics of energy policy
