The book covers all aspects of Irish natural history including geology, botany, zoology and ecology. It provides detailed descriptions and illustrations of hundreds of species of plants and animals and is an indispensable reference for anyone interested in Irish natural history or ecology. The Natural History of Ireland by Philip O'Sullivan Beare c. 1590-1660 is an important source of the history of Ireland's natural environment and its political history. It was originally written in Latin by Don Philip O'Sullivan Beare, an Irish nobleman living in exile in Spain, and formed part of his Zoilogomastix. 1625 O'Sullivan Beare wrote the Zoilogomastix in order to refute the Topographia Hiberniae of Giraldus Cambrensis, which was very derogatory of Ireland and the Irish people. The Topographia was still the accepted text on Ireland in the seventeenth century, which angered Philip O'Sullivan as it contained so many inaccuracies in its description of Ireland. Book One of the Zoilogomastix highlights his reaction to these propagandist texts, denigrating Ireland and comments on the natural habitat and features such as rivers, plants, animals, fish and birds of Ireland. Species listed are named in four languages including Irish. An introduction by Denis O'Sullivan gives an overall history of the O'Sullivan's and Philip in particular. This book has never been translated into English before, thus making this a unique publication. This translation is both faithful to the original and accessible to the general reader The ability to deal with a complex multilingual manuscript of this kind is now rare and it is to the credit of Dr O Sullivan that this is such a readable edition of the text This translation constitutes an important contribution to scholarship pertaining to O Sullivan Beare early modern Irish Latin literature and Irish history in general and will be of interest to historians of science as well as the broad group of historians of early modern Ireland and the connections with Europe of the time

A Natural History of Ireland in Three Parts Molyneux,1726      The Natural History of Ireland; Volume 4 Robert Patterson,William Thompson,James R. Garrett,2023-07-18      Nature and the Environment in Nineteenth-century Ireland Matthew Kelly,2019

The environmental humanities are one of the most exciting and rapidly expanding areas of interdisciplinary study and this collection of essays is a pioneering attempt to apply these approaches to the study of nineteenth century Ireland By bringing together historians geographers and literary scholars new insights are offered into familiar subjects and unfamiliar subjects are brought out into the light Essays re considering O Connellism Lord Palmerston and Isaac Butt rub shoulders with examinations of agricultural improvement Dublin s animal geographies and Ireland s healing places Literary writers like Emily Lawless and Seumas O Sullivan are looked at anew encouraging us to re think Darwinian influences in Ireland and the history of the Irish literary revival and transnational perspectives are brought to bear on Ireland s national park history and the dynamics of Irish natural history Much modern Irish history is concerned with access to natural resources whether this reflects the catastrophic effect of the Great Famine or the conflicts associated with agrarian politics but historical and literary analyses are rarely framed explicitly in these terms The collection responds to the material turn in the humanities and contemporary concern about the environment by re imagining Ireland s nineteenth century in fresh and original ways
