

BACKYARD BIRDING

Whether you live in a downtown apartment with a shared backyard or a country cottage with an extensive garden, birding can begin at home.

Through the seasons, people have delighted in observing the activities of the birds. Improving the bird count in their yards. Then to see how they have a sense of joy and wonder, and a sense of companionship.

Providing food, water, and nesting sites for birds in your yard will significantly increase opportunities for observing them. It will also help many species that in recent years have struggled to find suitable nesting and foraging habitat.

Once they have discovered your yard, many birds will keep coming back. Hummingbirds, such as Song Sparrows and House Finches, may build their whole life cycle around a particular feeder system. Some migratory birds, such as Winter Wren, Sparrows, and Purple Finches, will return to spend winter in the same yard year after year.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU

Some of the most interesting accounts of backyard birding are his found in Walden or Life in the Woods, written for the nineteenth-century reader and philosopher, Henry David Thoreau. The series of 18 essays explores the relationship between humans and nature. Thoreau, detailed notes on activities of the birds found around Thoreau's pond garden. Thoreau's observations and the constraints and beauty of a commercial life in 1840s Thoreau.

connected to the woods in contact an experiment in living. For two years, he lived in a cabin which he had built on the shores of Walden Pond and Concord in Massachusetts. Here he spent many hours contemplating the wonders of nature. With time, human contact during these years, the woodland birds became his constant companions and he devoted much of his writing to observations of their behavior.

In Walden, he discovered kindred spirits, and he marveled at the simplicity and freedom of their life. The experience at Walden gave rise to a lifelong fascination with birds and ultimately shaped Thoreau's philosophy on nature.

SAVE FOOD Consider providing water when winter comes. It is difficult to provide enough water to see them through the long winter.

SETTING UP A FEEDER STATION Birds have a number of requirements. They need food, water, protection from predators, and somewhere to roost. All these needs can be covered for in an average garden, even in urban areas.

For your feeder station to be as effective as possible, it's important that you choose appropriate foods, present them in the right way, and make sure your station is well protected.

To further attract local birds and increase opportunities for observing bird behavior, you may also decide to put up a station or even. And if you have the space, cultivating trees and other plants will help some your yard into a more wildlife refuge. There is sufficient guidance in the following pages to get you started with backyard birding, but always try to learn from the birds themselves. Each area of the country has its own species, even species has different requirements, and individual birds will act in different ways. Creating the perfect environment for local birds will involve trial and error. Don't become discouraged. The rewards for both bird and bird are great.

BIRD CAMERAS Bird cameras can help you observe bird behavior in your yard. They can be used to observe birds in the yard, even in the winter.

OBSERVING BIRDS IN THE YARD Backyard birding can provide you with a rich insight into the life cycle of birds.

PROJECT INFORMATION

One way of getting your backyard birding experience to go further is to become involved in Project Information. This is a project of the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University. Project Information is a project of the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University. Project Information is a project of the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University. Birds generally follow a regular routine. They do the same things—feeding, preening, bathing—at the same time, and for the same length of time, each day. Even if you only attract a few common species, being able to watch them in different stages of the day, for as long as you want is a great way to learn more about them.

Watching birds in the yard will also help you learn your identification skills. In the field, most songbirds move quickly and keep their distance from humans. Difficult to see, they are even harder to watch. Feeders and nestboxes bring the birds to the observer, and if the birds feel well protected, they will become confident enough to spend long periods close to buildings and people. This makes it far easier for you identify them and learn about them by watching field guides like our 14 Birdfinder (p. 84).
