Perceptions of the Holocaust in Europe and Muslim Communities Günther Jikeli,Joëlle Allouche-Benayoun,2012-11-08 The way people think about the Holocaust is changing The particular nature of the transformation depends on people s historical perspectives and how they position themselves and their nation or community vis vis the tragedy Understandably European Muslims perceive the Holocaust as less central to their history than do other Europeans Yet while the acknowledgement and commemoration of the horrors of the Holocaust are increasingly important in Europe Holocaust denial and biased views on the Holocaust are widespread in European Muslims countries of origin In this book a number of distinguished scholars and educators of various backgrounds discuss views of the Holocaust Problematic views are often influenced by a persistent attitude of Holocaust denial which is derived in part from discourses in the Muslim communities in their countries of origin The essays collected here explore the backgrounds of these perceptions and highlight positive approaches and developments Many of the contributions were written by people working in the field and reflecting on their experiences This collection also reveals that problematic views of the Holocaust are not limited to Muslim communities

Perception-based Marketing of Parishes using the example of Catholic Academics and Students Thomas Peters,2019-03-28 The Roman Catholic Church in Germany is faced with an increasingly pluralistic and secularized society that further precipitates the decline in membership that has been ongoing already since the 1970s through instances of aging population and church leavings and has been causing at the level of locally and regionally operating parishes and their establishments a growing shortage of personnel and other resources Here a marketing communication that is based on target group specific perception can be useful to remedy the situation in that the religious and social offers as well as the personal and media appearance of parishes are adjusted to population groups that credit to their socioeconomic potentials are able to substantially contribute to building social capital in church contexts Particularly Catholic Academics with high affinity to the Church make their comprehensive individual professional and financial resources available more frequently and more consistently for voluntary engagements than the majority of the German population A group that positively engages to great extent is that of those students and Academics who are organized in Catholic student fraternities or associations and their local institutions A targeted involvement of this small but high resourced population group in local church activities can be a substantial and existential aid for the Catholic Church in Germany and sustain its further development This is explored and discussed on the example of the largest academic association in Europe Cartel Confederation of the Catholic German Student Associations CV in German Cartellverband der katholischen deutschen Studentenverbindungen and attached specific practical recommendations for parish marketing The Germany based research results can be applied to other European countries such as Austria and Switzerland Furthermore the discussion of results offer a broad range of new perspectives and ideas for church marketing in those countries which have a living culture of denominational student associations
