The Development of Perception, Cognition and Language Paul van Geert, 2017-03-31 Originally published in 1983 the aim of this book was to discuss some fundamental problems of cognitive developmental psychology at the time The theme which underlies the discussion is that scientific knowledge of the cognitive characteristics of other people starts from the cognitive instruments that we psychologist employ viz our theories models assumptions methods of enquiry etc Thus our scientific cognitive equipment not only provides the format in which cognition in other people is expressed it also exemplifies in some abstract sense this cognition The first part of the book deals with the concept of development in relation to the structure of developmental theories It is argued that theories originate from implicit conceptual analyses of implicit final state definitions Starting from this specific view on the nature of developmental theories the second part of the book discusses perception and perceptual development

Understanding Human Development Ursula M. Staudinger, Ulman E.R. Lindenberger, 2012-12-06 K Warner Schaie I am pleased to write a foreword for this interesting volume particularly as over many years I have had the privilege of interacting with the editors and a majority of the contributors in various professional roles as a colleague mentor or research collaborator The editors begin their introduction by asking why one would want to read yet another book on human development They immediately answer their question by pointing out that many developmentally oriented texts and other treatises neglect the theoretical foundations of human development and fail to embed psychological constructs within the multidisciplinary context so essential to understanding development This volume provides a positive remedy to past deficiencies in volumes on human development with a well organized structure that leads the reader from a general introduction through the basic processes to methodological issues and the relation of developmental constructs to social context and biological infrastructure This approach does not surprise After all the editors and most of the contributors at one time or another had a connection to the Max Planck Institute of Human Development in Berlin whether as students junior scientists or senior visitors That institute under the leadership of Paul Baltes has been instrumental in pursuing a systematic lifespan approach to the study of cognition and personality Over the past two decades it has influenced the careers of a generation of scientists who have advocated long term studies of human development in an interdisciplinary context
