Law and renewable energy Fernando Joaquim Ferreira Maia,□□ (Hai Yan),□□□ (Haitian Ma),Ana Paula Basso,2023-08-01
Discussing the right of Renewable Energies is to ensure the possibility of sustainable development by a path different from that taken by the great central nations Academics from China and Brazil lend themselves through this cooperation to the production of knowledge that serves as a basis for an adequate regulation of the matter taking into account the international law for people s development and the common principles of environmental protection added to the social protection and improvement of institutions plus the control of planned actions regarding the execution and implementation of this new energy matrix Law is a language that makes it possible in addition to esolving possible conflicts to guide and put into practice concrete actions in the sense of expanding possibilities for the good use of renewable energies The right of access to open countryside Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts,Edward Leigh,2007-06-21
The Countryside Rights of Way Act 2000 introduced a public right to walk across designated mountain moor heath downs and registered common land in England DEFRA tasked the Countryside Agency with opening up the new access by the end of 2005 and the target was met with two months to spare However the implementation of the right to roam cost the Countryside Agency 24 6 million more than anticipated with knock on impacts on other programmes This report looks at the implementation of open access and the effect of the policy under the headings encouraging the public to use the right to roam across the countryside protecting the environment of access land and the rights of landowners improving planning and project management However the success of legislation is as yet unknown because there is no information on the extent to which the public are making use of their new right In October 2006 the responsibility for open access passed from the Countryside Agency to Natural England The All India Digest, Section II, Civil, 1811-1911 T. result of their work was the creation the OS maps we all know and use Today the trig pillars are redundant overtaken by new digital mapping technologies satellites and GPS they remain only as analogue memorials to a hidden human endeavour This book aims to record their labours

Assessment of governance mechanisms, livelihood outcomes and incentive instruments for green rubber in Myanmar Miles Kenney-Lazar,2016-07-29 Over the past decade rubber cultivation has expanded throughout the Mekong region from established centers of production in Thailand China and Vietnam to new sites in Laos Myanmar and Cambodia Rubber has brought opportunities for increased incomes and livelihood improvement as well as social and environmental risks The2012 drop in rubber prices has sent the sector into disarray halting the expansion of rubber and constraining the ability of farmers and companies to profit This study examines how rubber production in Myanmar is governed especially the socio ecological dynamics of varying forms of production smallholding contract farming and large scale estate plantations Based upon an analysis of secondary literature and interviews with key stakeholders it was found that rubber production in Myanmar is for the most part not green meaning that it has not reduced poverty and protected ecosystem services and forested areas The price crash has prevented most smallholding farmers from increasing their income Wages on large scale plantations have been low and only a limited amount of work for Myanmar people is available Large scale estates have been developed on land expropriated from communities and have replaced forested areas that provide important ecosystem services to local communities The paper argues that if rubber is to be truly green then significant changes to production and trade must be made including minimum price supports from the state appropriate land use planning measures the establishment of cooperatives theprotection of community land rights and the implementation of agroforestry rubber production models
