Cognitive and Mental Health Improvement Under- and Post-COVID-19 Chong Chen, Gabriele Nibbio, Yuka Kotozaki, 2025-03-19 An increasing body of research suggests that the COVID-19 pandemic has worsened global mental health and caused more cognitive impairments Whereas the COVID-19 pandemic is still ongoing in some regions it is expected to be ending for most regions in the very near future From a psychological psychiatric and public mental health perspective it is of vital importance to conduct effective and efficient interventions to promote cognitive and mental health for they not only are essential for us to cope with the ongoing pandemic but also necessary for us to rebuild a better world post the pandemic Not to say that a healthy cognitive and mental health state is at the core of human wellbeing and deserves its own place From previous studies and everyday practices we already know that regular exercise appropriate sleep nutritious diet close social ties connection with nature mindfulness among others help improve cognition and boost mental health However the optimal regimen for each specific cognitive and mental health outcome for a specific population including both those of healthy and clinical is unclear and remain to be identified Furthermore the underlying psychological physiological and neurobiological mechanisms through which each activity or intervention improves cognition and promotes mental health are to be clarified The aim of this Research Topic is to publish a wide range of studies that help address these unsolved issues and advance our understanding of what activities and interventions help improve cognition and promote mental health Any topics relevant to cognitive functions academic or work performance affective wellbeing and mental health are welcome Both studies of acute and chronic regular effects are welcome The subjects can be healthy human volunteers clinical patients or animals of different ages and sexes Article types include but are not limited to original research brief research reports clinical trials reviews meta-analyses hypothesis and theory articles For original research and brief research reports the design can be cross-sectional longitudinal or interventional as long as they provide insights into cognitive and mental health promotion      How Do Emotions and Feelings Regulate Physical Activity? Darko Jekauc, Ralf Brand, 2017-09-12

Up to date the scientific discussion about how frequency and regularity of physical activity can be increased is dominated by social cognitive models. However, increasing evidence suggests that emotions and feelings have greater influence on physical activity than originally assumed. Rhodes, Fiala, Conner 2009. Generally speaking, humans possess an evaluative system with a basic action tendency to approach pleasurable events and to avoid aversive ones. Cacioppo, Berntson 1999. Evaluative responses to a behavior and associated emotional states may influence a decision regarding whether or not to repeat being physically active. Generally, behavior associated with positive evaluations has a higher probability of being repeated than behaviors without such an association. On the contrary, an association with negative evaluations tends to decrease the probability of repeating to be physically active. Hence, evaluative responses to physical activity or the related situation can be an important aspect in the process of physical activity maintenance. McAuley et al 2007. Several social cognitive models of behavior change and maintenance were recently extended to take the influence of affective responses into account in a way that variables already included in the models, e.g., outcome expectancies or attitudes, were more clearly articulated into their cognitive and affective components. For example, with regard to Social Cognitive Theory, Gellert, Ziegelmann, and Schwarzer 2012 proposed to distinguish between affective and health-related outcome expectancies and in the Theory of Planned Behavior, researchers suggested to differentiate between cognitive and affective attitudes. Lawton, Conner, McEachan 2009. The results of these and other studies suggest that affective components make a unique contribution to the explanation of the physical activity behavior. Brand 2006. Other examples come from social cognition research where it was shown that automatic evaluative responses are part of our everyday life and that they decisively influence health behavior. Hofmann, Friese, Wiers 2008. Accordingly, there is evidence that people who exercise regularly hold more positive automatic evaluations with exercise than non-exercisers. Bluemke, Brand, Schweizer, Kahlert 2010. Although significant progress has been made in showing that evaluative responses to physical activity and associated emotional states are important predictors of physical activity, underlying psychological processes are far from being fully understood. Some important issues still remain to be resolved. Which role play affective states compared to concrete emotions when influencing physical activity? How do affective states and emotions interact with cognitive variables such as intentions? Are evaluative processes before, during, or after physical activity important to predict future physical activity? Do negative and positive evaluations interact antagonistically or rather synergistically when physical activity as a new behavior shall be adopted? Future research will help us to resolve these and a lot of other so far unresolved issues.
