referring to ethics that transcend mere social convention a way of being that is the actualization of the attributes of God To explain the Truth is indeed a difficult task Words being limited can never really express the perfection of the Absolute the Unbound Thus for those who are imperfect words create doubt and misunderstanding Yet If one cannot drink up the entire ocean one can drink to one's limit Philosophers have written volumes and spoken endlessly of the Truth but somehow their efforts have always fallen short For the sufi philosophers are those who view the Perfection of the Absolute from a limited perspective so all they see is part of the Absolute not the Infinite in its entirety It is indeed true that what philosophers see is correct nevertheless it is only a part of the whole One is reminded of Rumi's well known story of a group of men in India who had never seen an elephant One day they came to a place where an elephant was In complete darkness they approached the animal each man feeling it Afterwards they described what they thought they had perceived Of course their descriptions were different The one who felt a leg imagined the elephant to be a pillar The one who felt the animal's ear described the elephant as a fan and so on Each one of their descriptions with respect to the various parts they had experienced was true However as far as accurately describing the whole their conceptions had all fallen short If they had had a candle the difference of opinions would not have come about The candle's light would have revealed the elephant as a whole Only by the light of the Spiritual Path and the mystic way can the Truth be discovered In order for one to truly witness the Perfection of the Absolute one must see with one's inner being which perceives the whole of Reality This witnessing happens when one becomes perfect losing one's partial existence in the Whole If the Whole is likened to the Ocean and the part to a drop the sufi says that witnessing the Ocean with the eye of a drop is impossible However when the drop becomes one with the Ocean it sees the Ocean with the eye of the Ocean
