

Critical Analysis of the Film Requiem for a Dream

The film Requiem for a Dream (dir. Darren Aronofsky, 2000) depicts four individuals and their increasing addiction to substances. This psychological drama narrates parallel encounters linked by the relationship among the lonely. Taking place in Brooklyn, the audience tracks the four interconnected characters down a spiraling pit with no return. While the film could perceive as merely a reflection on addiction, Aronofsky's content is based on the obsession with consumption and is unlimited to the conventional definition of a drug. In fact, Requiem for a Dream questions what could be considered a drug, the individual and group delusions of the 'American Dream', the obsessions from which these fallacies form, and to what heights to which the characters will climb to fulfill such misconceptions and the depths to which they plunge when the rose-colored glasses are removed.

The general approach to Requiem for a Dream is to digest it as a film about addiction, but addiction solely acts as a plot device to move the storyline. Aronofsky presents a controlling metaphor in the first scenes of each character as they present themselves on the screen. As they introduce themselves to the viewer, it is apparent that each character is trapped. For example, the first scene in which the mother, Sarah Goldfarb, has locked herself in a closet while her son, Harry, is attempting to coax her into allowing him to steal her television. The screen is split in two as we witness Sara refuse and as Harry persuades. Sara is trapped inside this closet as an object tries to take away her comfort.

When Sara receives an anonymous phone call about how she has been 'selected' to be on television, her obsession begins. Sara progressively becomes dependent on the idea of Requiem TV and Requiem TV becomes a model country for the efficacy of privatized sustainable hydropower projects as viable options for World Bank led development By viewing hydropower as a process that creates ecologically uncertain environments Jerome Whittington reveals how new forms of managerial care have emerged in the context of a privatized dam project successfully targeted by transnational activists Based on ethnographic work inside the hydropower company as well as with Laotians affected by the dam he investigates how managers technicians and consultants grapple with unfamiliar environmental obligations through new infrastructural configurations locally inscribed ethical practices and forms of flexible experimentation informed by American management theory Far from the authoritative expertise that characterized classical modernist hydropower sustainable development in Laos has been characterized by a shift from the risk politics of the 1990s to an ontological politics in which the institutional conditions of infrastructure investment are pervasively undermined by sophisticated hactivism Whittington demonstrates how late industrial environments are infused with uncertainty inherent in the anthropogenic ecologies themselves Whereas anthropogenic usually describes human induced environmental change it can also show how new capacities for being human are generated when people live in ecologies shot through with uncertainty Implementing what Foucault called a historical ontology of ourselves Anthropogenic Rivers formulates a new materialist critique of the dirty ecologies of late industrialism by pinpointing the opportunistic ambitious and speculative ontology of capitalist natures

Anthropogenic Rivers Jerome Whittington, 2019-01-15 In the 2000s Laos was treated as a
