

The image features two men in professional attire. The man on the left is older, with grey hair and a beard, wearing a dark suit, light blue shirt, and patterned tie. The man on the right is younger, with brown hair, wearing a dark suit, white shirt, and gold tie. They are both smiling. The background is a blurred industrial or laboratory setting. A green border surrounds the entire image. A dark blue rectangular box with a green border is positioned in the upper center, containing text and a signature.

Link, Jeffrey E. Petrusa, 2007-01-24 Using a cutting edge structure where a current description of the service sector and up to date case studies are compared and contrasted with innovative activity in manufacturing this book contributes towards a better theoretical understanding of innovation in the U S service sector The U S service sector is the largest sector in the U S economy and accounts for an increasingly significant share of U S gross domestic product currently 68 percent Both in the United States as well as in other industrialized nations the service sector is a dynamic component of economic activity and growth As pervasive and economically important as the service sector is innovative activity in service sector firms remains somewhat of an enigma it is not well understood and not well defined because it differs dramatically from the traditional model of innovation in manufacturing Innovation in the U S Service Sector fills this void placing emphasis on the United States but with global relevance It is essential reading for all students of business and management economics and political science Industrial Innovation and Firm Performance Mario I. Kafouros, 2008-01-01 Examines the impacts of innovation and scientific knowledge on the productivity performance of multinational corporations and the conditions under which companies benefit from their technological discoveries Also investigates the extent to which the research efforts of other companies can contribute to a firm s productivity and how multinationals build on external inventions ideas and knowledge
