Research Instruments in Social Gerontology David J. Mangen, 1982 The increasing number of older people in the United States has served to focus attention upon the processes of aging and the effectiveness of social programs for the elderly In order to plan effective programs accurate social measures are necessary Now more than ever before researchers require conceptually explicit instruments designed to assess individual and social behaviors attitudes and traits in the elderly population This is the first in a three volume series designed to serve the needs of researchers evaluators and clinicians in assessing the instruments used in the field of aging The measures review in Volume 1 focus on the cognitive reactions of older people to aging and on the assessments of aging made by people who are not yet old This volume also contains the series introduction which explains the methods used for evaluating the instruments and assesses the status of gerontological measurement today Each chapter is devoted to instruments in a particular subject area such as intellectual functioning personality self esteem and ethnic group identification Most chapters are composed of three parts First there is a concise narrative review of the major theoretical concerns and measurement strategies within that particular research domain The second part is a collection of abstracts each of which presents a conceptual definition and a description of a specific instrument together with data about samples reliability validity scaling properties and correlations with age Whenever possible the instruments themselves constitute the third part of the chapter

Parenting Across the Life Span Jane Beckman Lancaster, Research on parenting through the life course has developed around two separate approaches Evolutionary biology provides fresh perspectives from life history theory using behavioral ecology and parental investment theory At the same time the social and behavioral sciences integrates research from long term studies of individual development and from the collection of life histories This path breaking book advances evolutionary life history research by integrating perspectives of these two approaches into a biosocial science of the life course It examines parenthood as a commitment extending throughout life and focuses on the impact on parental and child behavior of changes in the timing distribution and intensity of parental investment This perspective is particularly appropriate for research on parenting since the family is the universal human institution within which the bearing and rearing of children has been based and which transmits traditions beliefs and values to the young

New Dimensions in Spirituality, Religion, and Aging Vern Bengtson, Merrill Silverstein, 2018-09-03 New Dimensions in Spirituality Religion and Aging expands the traditional focus of religiosity to include and evaluate recent research and discoveries on the role of secular spirituality in the aging process Contributors examine the ways conventional religion and other forms of spirituality affect human development health and longevity and they demonstrate how myth creation enables humans to make meaning in their lives Taken together the book points to further research to enhance current knowledge approaches to care and social policies

Aging and the Religious Dimension Susan A. Eisenhandler, 1994-02-17 Aging and religion has been badly neglected in the field of Gerontology This book containing 13 chapters of original theory and research is devoted to understanding the place that religion and spirituality hold in the lives of elderly persons The authors each experts in their own field approach this issue from their backgrounds in the social sciences and the humanities Overall this is a ground breaking collection It is one of the first attempts to seek to understand the role that religion plays in the lives of elderly persons Based on their various multi disciplinary perspectives the authors make use of a variety of qualitative and quantitative methodologies as well as personal narrative and literature to grapple with this issue Finally the book is unique in that it addresses scholars and students including the educated layman rather than the professional alone
