Big American Airlines flight leaving its hub at Los Angeles International Airport on Feb. 11, 2001, is a Boeing 747-400, one of the largest aircraft in the world. The plane is seen from the side, showing its four engines and the tail section. The aircraft is white with blue and red stripes. The background is a clear blue sky.

It is a common sense-based strategy and another pointer to how the next light switch could bring the world from the darkness into the light. It might mean turning back the clock to the multiple generations of a village community.  Share your ideas by visiting the community website to find space to engage others in a debate or discussion.
