Joachim Prinz, 2004 One of the most stylized facts in labor economics is the finding that wages tend to rise with job duration but what is the role of productivity between this relation Intuitively it seems rather unspectacular that experienced workers earnings are higher than otherwise comparable junior workers but economic literature offers three competing theories explaining this phenomenon A unique database from a single professional sports industry covering the past decade of player performance and wages in the National Basketball Association NBA is used to test the superiority of one model over others in explaining players upwards sloping age earnings profiles The empirical results show little evidence of the notion that player wages are solely determined on the basis of their productivity Findings are rather in accordance with shirking and matching ideas Returns to tenure are found to be significant but its magnitude is reduced when the spurious bias stemming from OLS is controlled for The fact that tenure remains considerably large unaffected of productivity but is simultaneously mitigated due to job match specific effects is in harmony with incentive and matching arguments Joachim Prinz born 1971 studied economics at the University of Trier Copenhagen Business School and American University Washington D C From 1999-2001 he was a scientific co worker at the University of Greifswald Department of Economics Since 2001 University of Witten Herdecke Biographical Dictionary of American Sports David L.
