Ethnic Minority Cinema in China's Nation-State Building Kwai-Cheung Lo, 2025-02-03 Ethnic Minority Cinema in China's Nation State Building investigates the relationship between cinematic productions about non Han ethnic minorities and China's nation state building project from the early Republican era of the 1920s to the current authoritarian regime in the twenty first century Kwai Cheung Lo argues that the glossy but superficial cinematic depictions of non Han ethnic minorities manufactured and manipulated by state authorities have deeply penetrated the Chinese public's conception of what an ideal multiethnic nation should be like as well as what it means to be Chinese under political unification Lo understands these representations of ethnic minorities as part of a larger ecosystem and the culture's values and life practices of non Han ethnic minorities as closely entwined with environmental issues and politics This intertwining Lo argues suggests a crisis in objectification and identification of both people and the environment that plays out in cinema featuring ethnic minorities Lo traces these depictions of Chinese ethnic minority groups in films created by both Han majority and non Han filmmakers examining how these representations became a site in which state authorities Han and non Han communities and foreign agencies compete and interact under the larger context of building and imagining the Chinese nation state Camera Craft , 1927
