Perspectives in Therapeutic Practice Andy Lock,Tom Strong,2012-04-05 For an endeavour that is largely based on conversation it may seem obvious to suggest that psychotherapy is discursive After all therapists and clients primarily use talk or forms of discourse to accomplish therapeutic aims However talk or discourse has usually been seen as secondary to the actual business of therapy a necessary conduit for exchanging information between therapist and client but seldom more Psychotherapy primarily developed by mapping particular experiential domains in ways responsive to human intervention Only recently though has the role that discourse plays been recognized as a focus in itself for analysis and intervention Discursive Perspectives in Therapeutic Practice presents an overview of discursive perspectives in therapy along with an account of their conceptual underpinnings The book starts by setting out the case for a discursive and relational approach to therapy by juxtaposing it to the tradition that that leads to the diagnostic approach of the DSM V and medical psychiatry It then presents a thorough review of a range of innovative discursive methods each presented by an authority in their respective area The book shows how discursive therapies can help people construct a better sense of their world and move beyond the constraints caused by the cultural preconceptions opinions and values the client has about the world The book makes a unique contribution to the philosophy and psychiatry literature in examining both the philosophical bases of discursive therapy whilst also showing how discursive perspectives can be applied in real therapeutic situations The book will be of great value and interest to psychotherapists and psychiatrists wishing to understand explore and apply these innovative techniques

End Of Knowing Fred Newman, Lois Holzman, 2006-04-10 First published in 1997 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company

Furthering Talk Thomas Strong, David Pare, 2012-12-06 Recently a client coming in for her second appointment told me the story of how she had been volunteering her time for the past several years to free several innocent prisoners from Illinois prisons She told me how tenaciously and persistently she had to work against politicians who did not want these releases to take place I was so struck by her dedication and personal sacrifice of time money and energy At the end of her story I thanked her I said there were many times when I heard some story of injustice on the news and I thought to myself how I should get involved or at least write a letter But somehow other matters would take precedence my anger would dissipate and soon the issue would slip my mind Listening to her I felt grateful that there were people like her to take up the cause and put energy and voice to my concerns I looked at her and thanked her again Reading this manuscript I was reminded of this story Editing a book on postmodern thinking and ways of being with clients is certainly not the same as confronting politicians or taking on power structures in a justice system But nonetheless after reading this manuscript I found myself grateful to Tom Strong and David Pare for their taking the time and committing the energy to the collection This is a book that should have been written It is timely and moves ideas forward This is a very worthwhile endeavor and the product reflects their dedication to contemporary ideas

Relational Being Kenneth J. Gergen, 2009-07-30 This book builds on two current developments in psychology scholarship and practice The first centers on broad discontent with the individualist tradition in which the rational agent or autonomous self is considered the fundamental atom of social life Critique of individualism spring not only from psychologists working in the academy but also from communities of therapy and counseling The second and related development from which this work builds is the search for alternatives to individualist understanding Thus therapists such as Steve Mitchell along with feminists at the Stone Center expand the psychoanalytic tradition to include a relational orientation to therapy The present volume will give voice to the critique of individualism but its major thrust is to develop and illustrate a far more radical and potentially exciting landscape of relational thought and practice that now exists Most existing attempts to build a relational foundation remain committed to a residual form of individualist psychology The present work carves out a space of understanding in which relational process stands prior to the very concept of the individual More broadly the book attempts to develop a thoroughgoing relational account of human activity In doing so Gergen reconstitutes the mind as a manifestation of relationships and bears out these ideas in a range of everyday professional practices including family therapy collaborative classrooms and organizational psychology

Schools for Growth Lois Holzman, 2016-05-06 A passionate deconstruction and reconstruction of learning development and schooling that urges teachers to explore and create new educational opportunities for themselves and their students Schools for Growth Radical Alternatives to Current Educational Models asks the following questions Can we create ways for people to learn the kinds of things that are necessary for functional adaptation without stifling their capacity to continuously create their growth Can schools become environments that support children to perform not only as learners but as developers of their lives This book challenges educators to look at the deeply rooted assumptions about schooling learning and development and urges that the way psychology and education have constructed our conceptions of what it means to teach to learn and to grow may be the most serious impediment to the learning and developing of children Beyond the criticism the author presents an original methodological reformation of what learning and development are as relational activities and then takes readers on a visit to three radical independent school settings Arguing that current educational models have been misguided by scientific psychology the author states that the dominant model of human development actually hinders development Moreover as learning theory has become infused with developmental theory over the past 30 years the overly cognitive manner in which psychologists have come to think about thinking learning and development has become further insinuated into education Both theories learning and developmental fail to recognize the human capacity for relational revolutionary activity and for performance The prevalent mode of education acquisitional learning is grounded in a world view that gives primacy to knowledge and knowing which Holzman believes is inconsistent with ongoing developmental activity The author focuses on developmental learning a social constructionist activity theoretic conception of development which includes a transformation and synthesis of Vygotsky and philosopher Ludwig Wittgenstein She also discusses educational projects that are self conscious attempts to break with key elements of modern epistemology and the dominant psychological paradigm as they are perpetrated in contemporary educational theory and practice Their specific philosophies and practices highlight important methodological issues raised in the attempt to create postmodern schools schools more
