Perinatal And Multigeneration Carcinogenesis:

Perinatal and Multigeneration Carcinogenesis N. P. Napalkov, International Agency for Research on Cancer, 1989 This book examines the danger that exposure of individuals to carcinogenic agents may cause cancers in their offspring either by a transplacental effect from mother to fetus or by a genetic effect on the germ cells before conception Over thirty international experts review the most current research in the field discussing exposure analysis in animals metabolism of carcinogens the role of oncogenes multigeneration animal experiments and human epidemiological studies Agents considered include polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons drugs such as diethylstilbestrol viruses and radiation and the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki Environmental Health Perspectives ,2003-02 Hormonal Carcinogenesis

Carcinogenesis ,1993 Environmental Health Perspectives James K. Selkirk, 1993 Cytotoxic, Mutagenic and Carcinogenic Potential of Heavy Metals Related to Human Environment N. Hadjiliadis, 2012-12-06 Environmental pollution is one of the main problems to confront humanity with the heavy metals occupying a leading role among the most pernicious pollutants The metals cause cancer and other sicknesses Their cytotoxic mutagenic and carcinogenic potentials are not fully understood and any thorough investigation demands the combined efforts of scientists drawn from many different disciplines But the effects of heavy metals are not all negative some like cis DDP and some ruthenium and tin complexes have antitumour activity The idea underlying the present work is therefore to present a multidisciplinary perspective on heavy metals in the environment affording a better understanding of their action on human organisms and health aiming to make them less polluting and more environmentally friendly Human Cancer John Higginson, Calum S. Muir, Nubia

Perinatal Carcinogenesis, 1979 Advances in Nuclear Science and Technology Jeffery Lewins, Martin Becker, 2006-04-18 The present review volume not only covers a wide range of topics pertinent to nuclear science and technology but has attracted a distinguished international authorship for which the editors are grateful The opening review by Drs Janet Tawn and Richard Wakeford addresses the difficult matter of questioning scientific hypotheses in a court of law The United Kingdom experienced a substantial nuclear accident in the 1950s in the form of the Windscale Pile fire This in itself had both good and bad consequences the setting up of a licensing authority to ensure nuclear safety was one the understandable public sentiment concerning nuclear power despite the fire occurring in a weapons pile the other Windscale today is subsumed in the reprocessing plant at Sellafield operated by British Nuclear Fuels plc and it was inevitable perhaps that when an excess cluster of childhood leukaemia was observed in the nearby village of Seascale that public concern should be promoted by the media leading to the hearing of a claim of compensation brought on behalf of two of the families of BNFLs workers who had suffered that loss The review article demonstrates the complexity of understanding such a claim against the statistical fluctuations inherent and shows how the courts were persuaded of the need to propose a biological mechanism if responsibility were to be held The Company were undoubtedly relieved by the finding
