Gaines, Jr, 2016-08-18 Few observers of relationship dynamics would dispute the claim of interdependence theorists that a defining feature of close relationships is the extent to which partners influence each other's thoughts feelings or behaviors However partners do not behave simply in response to each other's behavior both partners in a given relationship bring themselves indeed their selves into the relationship as well Not only are individuals selves enormously complex and rich in content but so too are the multitude of personality characteristics including traits values attitudes motives and emotions that contribute to selves richness Gaines Jr provides a major integration of research on personality with research on relationship science and demonstrates how personality constructs can be readily incorporated into the two most influential theories of close relationships attachment theory and interdependence theory This study will be of value to scholars in the fields of close relationships personality psychology communication studies and family studies      Personality Jerry M. The Self in the Family Luciano L'Abate, 1997-01-07 In his acclaimed book A Theory of Personality Development Luciano L'Abate introduced a revolutionary theory of personality development and functioning that departed radically from traditional theories. In place of hypothetical traits existing in an empirical vacuum, Dr. L'Abate offered an image of observable interpersonal competencies functioning within the basic contexts of home, work, leisure, and the marketplace. Central to his theory was a developmental model that posited the family as the primordial setting in which propensities are formed and behavior patterns set. By defining personality in terms of the growth and interplay of interpersonal competencies, the L'Abate theory provided an epistemologically and empirically sound basis for understanding personality function and dysfunction as corollaries and extensions of one another. In The Self in the Family, Luciano L'Abate and Margaret Baggett again break new ground by expanding the L'Abate theory of personality development to encompass criminal and psychopathological behavior. Drawing upon mounting empirical evidence that the family paradigm is the major determinant of personality socialization throughout the life span, the authors develop a selfhood model with demonstrable links between the three domains of personality function: criminality and psychopathology. With the help of the model, they show how it is now possible to arrive at a personality-based interpretation of most deviant behaviors, including criminality, psychopathology, addictions, and even psychosomatic illnesses, and they describe various preventive and psychotherapeutic applications for this expanded theory of family-based personality development. The authors further elaborate on the theories developed in Dr. L'Abate's previous books by introducing the core concepts of hurt, the basic feeling underlying much of personality functioning and dysfunctioning, and a continuum of likeness, the fundamental determinant of interpersonal choices and behavior in friendships, parent-child relations, and marital relations. Offering an empirically rigorous, developmentally based, unified field theory of personality function, criminality, and psychopathology, The Self in the Family is essential reading for developmental and clinical psychologists, family therapists, personality theorists, and criminality and psychopathology researchers.
