contribution of urban wetlands in livable cities Urban wetlands are very valuable blue green infrastructure spaces for human settlements yet they are disappearing as a result of urbanization This phenomenon is worldwide but is particularly intense in Latin America Although international literature has made an effort to document the multiple ecosystem services provided by these ecosystems such as water and air cleansing flood mitigation and recreation among others we want to draw attention to the fact that the loss of urban wetlands affects the sustainability of cities and future generations Therefore and given the weakness of public policies implemented in the region for their protection it is essential to highlight good practices mechanisms and strategies aimed at Protection Conservation Innovation Restoration and work with the Community all of this hand in hand with the 17 Sustainable Development Goals The book offers a comprehensive coverage combining the need to protect and conserve urban wetlands from the pressures of urban growth as well as highlighting successful experiences of regulation and of course applied research aimed at nature based solution design for flood management and wastewater treatment restoration areas green infrastructure plans as well as experiences of collective work with communities in contexts of political tensions for the defense of wetlands      Urban and Regional Data Management Claire Ellul,Sisi generate information about the urban environment and the people who live there. Additionally, the volume of data generated in part through such techniques has in turn resulted in research into big data, how best to handle the data, analyse it, visualise it in different contexts. Thus the challenges and opportunities facing those working with these new types of urban data are manifold. Given this, the general theme for UDMS 2013 was Recent and Emerging Trends in the Management of New Urban Data. This book contains 20 papers selected from the long papers that were submitted for UDMS 2013. Each paper was reviewed by three independent academic reviewers from around the world, both for academic quality and for clarity in communication. The book is intended to be suitable for different readers, from city planners and architects to academics, students and policy makers, and those involved in urban planning.

The Paradox of Representation David Lublin, 2020-11-10. In The Paradox of Representation, David Lublin offers an unprecedented analysis of a vast range of rigorous empirical evidence that exposes the central paradox of racial representation. Racial redistricting remains vital to the election of African Americans and Latinos but makes Congress less likely to adopt policies favored by blacks. Lublin's evidence, together with policy recommendations for improving minority representation, will make observers of the political scene reconsider the avenues to fair representation. Using data on all representatives elected to Congress between 1972 and 1994, Lublin examines the link between the racial composition of a congressional district and its representative's race as well as ideology. The author confirms the view that specially drawn districts must exist to ensure the election of African Americans and Latinos. He also shows, however, that a relatively small number of minorities in a district can lead to the election of a representative attentive to their interests. When African Americans and Latinos make up 40 percent of a district, according to Lublin's findings, they have a strong liberalizing influence on representatives of both parties; when they make up 55 percent, the district is almost certain to elect a minority representative. Lublin notes that particularly in the South, the practice of concentrating minority populations into a small number of districts decreases the liberal influence in the remaining areas. Thus a handful of minority representatives almost invariably Democrats win elections, but so do a greater number of conservative Republicans. The author proposes that establishing a balance between majority-minority districts and districts where the minority population would be slightly more dispersed, making up 40 percent of a total district, would allow more African Americans to exercise more influence over their representatives.
