

190a) William Nichol of Birmingham, William Cook and Andrew Nichol, 1811. It made movements as well as dials. This particular dial has an unusual scalloped gold border to the chapter ring as well as very peculiar maps of the hemispheres. These are an early use of enamel materials for the latitude. The tables in the corners represent the four seasons.

191) Harry Bond, probably late 18th or 19th. Here is another Fulton dial possibly from the same era as the Parr dial, but employing unusual dial maps. There is an early portrait of Wellington on the main dial which is unusual. The Americas are on the left-hand hemisphere and the eclipse is above the equator instead of below it as on the Parr dial. This means that different watchmakers must have been used as the two dials differ in size.

190b) Parr of Liverpool, possibly John, 1814-18. This is a Fulton of Birmingham dial, 1811-18 showing very individualistic printing in brilliant colours of the two seasons before who have very gold faces. The maps of the world have the Americas on the right-hand side.
