Women, Art and the New Deal Katherine H. Adams, Michael L. Keene, 2015-12-23

In 1935 the United States Congress began employing large numbers of American artists through the Works Progress Administration: fiction writers, photographers, poster artists, dramatists, painters, sculptors, muralists, wood carvers, composers, and choreographers, as well as journalists, historians, and researchers. Secretary of Commerce and supervisor of the WPA, Harry Hopkins hailed it a renaissance of the arts if we can call it a rebirth when it has no precedent in our history. Women were eminently involved in creating a wide variety of art and craft, interweaving their own stories with those of other women whose lives might not otherwise have received attention. This book surveys the thousands of women artists who worked for the U.S. government, the historical and social worlds they described, and the collaborative depiction of womanhood they created at a pivotal moment in American history.
