Make Believe Moon:

Making Make-Believe Real Garry Wills, 2014-06-10 Shakespeare's plays abound with kings and leaders who crave a public stage and seize every opportunity to make their lives a performance Antony Cleopatra Richard III Othello and many others Such self-dramatizing characters appear in the work of other playwrights of the era as well Marlowe's Edward II and Tamburlaine among them But Elizabethan playwrights were not alone in realizing that a sense of theater was essential to the exercise of power Real rulers knew it too and none better than Queen Elizabeth In this fascinating study of political stagecraft in the Elizabethan era Garry Wills explores a period of vast cultural and political change during which the power of make-believe to make power real was not just a theory but an essential truth Wills examines English culture as Catholic Christianity's rituals were being overturned and a Protestant queen took the throne New iconographies of power were necessary for the new Renaissance liturgy to displace the medieval church state The author illuminates the extensive imaginative constructions that went into Elizabeth's reign and the explosion of great Tudor and Stuart drama that provided the imaginative power to support her long and successful rule Making Make-Believe MaryAnn F. The Highgrader William MacLeod Raine, 2022-03-09 Excerpt It was evening on the promenade deck of an ocean liner The sea was like glass and the swell hardly perceptible Land was in sight a vague uneven line rising mist like on the horizon Before morning the Victorian would be running up the St Lawrence Even for the most squeamish the discomforts of the voyage lay behind A pleasant good fellowship was in the air In some it took the form of an idle contentment a vague regret that ties newly formed must so soon be broken In others it found an expression more buoyant Merry voices of shuffleboard players drifted forward Young couples paced the deck and leaned over the rail to watch the phosphorescent glow The open windows of the smoking room gave forth the tinkle of glasses and the low rattle of chips All sounds blended into a mellow harmony

Fiction and Imagination in Early Cinema Mario Slušan, 2019-11-28 Shortlisted for the BAFTSS Best Monograph Award 2021 When watching the latest instalment of Batman it is perfectly normal to say that we see Batman fighting Bane or that we see Bruce Wayne making love to Miranda Tate We would not say that we see Christian Bale dressed up as Batman going through the motions of punching Tom Hardy dressed up as Bane Nor do we say that we see Christian Bale pretending to be Bruce Wayne making love with Marion Cotillard who is playacting the role Miranda Tate But if we look at the history of cinema and consider contemporary reviews from the early days of the medium we see that people thought precisely in this way about early film They spoke of film as no more than documentary recordings of actors performing on set In an innovative combination of philosophical aesthetics and new cinema history Mario Sluagan investigates how our default imaginative engagement with film changed over the first two decades of cinema It addresses not only the importance of imagination for the understanding of early cinema but also contributes to our understanding of what it means for a representational medium to produce fictions Specifically Sluagan argues that cinema provides a better model for understanding fiction than literature
