The first part of the book provides an introduction to French sentence structure before the following parts examine the grammar of verbs, nominals, particles and clauses and sentences. The Structure of Modern Standard French will be a valuable resource for students of French at undergraduate level and beyond. It assumes some prior knowledge of French grammar but is designed to be accessible to those with no background in linguistics.

The Advanced Learner Variety Emmanuelle Labeau, 2009. This volume originates from a workshop entitled 'Revisiting advanced varieties in L2 learning' organized by the editors at Aston University, Birmingham, UK, in June 2006. It consists of a peer-reviewed selection of the best contributions. Many different approaches have been used in the study of advanced learners and their characteristics. Specific areas of language have repeatedly been found to remain problematic even at advanced levels and much empirical research has been carried out. In particular areas of grammar such as the tense or agreement systems often pose difficulties as well as lexical idiosyncrasies such as formulaic sequences and the discourse pragmatic constraints operating in French. This volume brings together recent research exploring the advanced learner capabilities in each of those domains as well as possible explanations for the difficulties they raise for the L2 learner of French. Additionally, one of the areas which has received considerable attention in the French L2 literature on advanced learners, tense and aspect, is also explored from the point of view of French learners of English to explore any parallels. In presenting this research, the book clarifies the concept of the advanced learner: how does s/he differ from native speakers and why?

Universals in Comparative Morphology Jonathan David Bobaljik, 2012-10-05. An argument for and account of linguistic universals in the morphology of comparison combining empirical breadth and theoretical rigor. This groundbreaking study of the morphology of comparison yields a surprising result: that even in suppletion, the wholesale replacement of one stem by a phonologically unrelated stem (as in good better best), there emerge strikingly robust patterns, virtually exceptionless generalizations across languages. Jonathan David Bobaljik describes the systematicity in suppletion and argues that at least five generalizations are solid contenders for the status of linguistic universals. The major topics discussed include suppletion, comparative and superlative formation, deadjectival verbs and lexical decomposition. Bobaljik's primary focus is on morphological theory, but his argument also aims to integrate evidence from a variety of subfields into a coherent whole. In the course of his analysis, Bobaljik argues that the assumptions needed bear on choices among theoretical frameworks and that the framework of Distributed Morphology has the right architecture to support the account. In addition to the theoretical implications of the generalizations, Bobaljik suggests that the striking patterns of regularity in what otherwise appears to be the most irregular of linguistic domains provide compelling evidence for Universal Grammar The book strikes a unique balance between empirical breadth and theoretical detail The phenomenon that is the main focus of the argument suppletion in adjectival gradation is rare enough that Bobaljik is able to present an essentially comprehensive description of the facts at the same time it is common enough to offer sufficient variation to explore the question of universals over a significant dataset of more than three hundred languages Translation, Linguistics, Culture Nigel Armstrong, 2005-05-11 This book takes a linguistic approach to translation issues looking first at the structural view of language that explains the difficulty of translation and at theories of cultural non equivalence A subsequent chapter on text types readership and the translator s role completes the theoretical framework The linguistic levels of analysis are then discussed in ascending order from morpheme up to sentence while a summarising chapter considers various translation types and strategies again considered in relation to text type author and reader
