Health Insurance Reforms in Asia Sabrina Luk, 2014-03-26 This book empirically examines health care financing reforms and popular responses in three major cities in East Asia Shanghai Singapore and Hong Kong It adopts a new revised version of the theory of historical institutionalism to compare and explain the divergent reform paths in these three places over the past three decades It also examines forces that propel institutional change The book provides three detailed case studies on the development of health care financing reforms and the politics of implementing them It shows that health care systems in Shanghai Singapore and Hong Kong were the products of Western presence in the nineteenth century It illustrates how greater attention is paid to the roles played by ideas actors and environmental triggers without abandoning the core assumptions that political institutions and policy feedback remain central to impact health care financing reforms It shows that health care financing reform is shaped by a complex interplay of forces over time It also provides the most updated material about health care financing reforms in Shanghai Singapore and Hong Kong The central argument of this book is that health care financing reform is both an evolving process responding to changing circumstances and a political process revealing an intricate interplay of power relationships and diverse interests It shows that institutional changes in health care financing system can be incremental but transformative in nature It argues that social policies will continue to develop and welfare states will continue to adapt and evolve in order to cope with new risks and needs This book sheds new lights on understanding the politics of health care financing reform and sources and modes of institutional change
