United States. Department of State, 1948 Caring for Patients, Caring for Student Nurses Annette M. Jinks, 2018-12-17 First published in 1997 The nursing and health care fields are developing rapidly This new series of monographs offers reports of projects completed in 1997 in the fields of nursing and health care The aim of the series is to report studies that have relevance to contemporary nursing and health care practice It will include reports of research into aspects of clinical nursing care management and education The series will be of interest to all nurses and health care workers researchers managers and educators in the field The Public Health Nurse, 1924 The Trained Nurse and Hospital Review, 1918 Psycho-Physical Investigations with the Galvanometer and Pneumograph in Normal and Insane Individuals Carl Jung, 2024-05-09 This is one of Jung's early clinical experiments utilizing a new technique created by American Psychologists and is one of his earliest publications This is the second academic paper he published in English Originally published in English in the Journal of Neurology in London in 1907 this edition has updated the manuscript has been updated for readability This new edition contains an Afterword by the Translator a philosophic index of Jung's terminology and a timeline of his life and works Jung's experimental research into the association method and the psychogalvanic reflex his study of mediums and his links with Swiss psychiatry had many unique alliances with the American scene particularly because of the similar historical relationship between psychology and religion To understand Jung therefore one must consider the archetypal significance of America for Jung's own process of individuation as well as the subsequent Americanisation of Jungian ideas The galvanometer is an instrument that measures electrical conductance while the pneumograph measures respiratory function The study aimed to assess physiological responses in both normal and mentally ill subjects when exposed to different stimuli and situations The results of Jung's experiments provided insights into how physiological responses such as changes in skin conductance measured by the galvanometer and respiratory patterns measured by the pneumograph may differ between people with and without mental illness These differences may have helped researchers and clinicians to better understand the psychophysiological aspects of mental disorders and may have contributed to the development of diagnostic and therapeutic approaches in the fields of psychology and psychiatry Jung was particularly interested in how these physiological responses such as changes in skin conductance and respiration rates might correlate with emotional states and unconscious psychological activity This research aimed to demonstrate that mental illnesses could manifest in measurable physical reactions providing empirical evidence for the existence of unconscious emotional complexes The galvanometer for instance detected changes in the electrical resistance of the skin when subjects were presented with emotionally charged words during a word association test reflecting the activity of hidden complexes The study had two primary goals First it sought to illustrate the link between physiological responses and emotional states in both normal and pathological conditions thereby lending scientific support to psychoanalytic theories about the unconscious Second Jung aimed to show that these physiological measures could be used to differentiate between mentally ill and healthy subjects offering potential applications in clinical diagnosis
