and clinical practice guidelines in the elderly Nutritional Intervention in the Aging Process H.J. Armbricht, J.M. Prendergast, R.M. Coe, 2012-12-06 There has been much popular and scientific interest in the fields of nutrition and aging in recent years. As the importance of proper nutrition in children and young adults becomes more fully understood, it is natural to wonder if proper nutrition could play a similar role in later life. Recent research has indicated that nutrition can potentially intervene in the aging process in at least two ways. First, studies in animals and humans have shown that nutrition can be used to improve functional status, which in turn is related to perceived quality of life. Second, nutritional manipulation has been used to extend maximal life span in laboratory animals. How these interesting findings apply to the human situation remains to be explored. The purpose of this book is twofold. The first is to present recent advances in our basic knowledge of how nutrition and aging interact with each other. The second is to discuss some applications of this knowledge to the care of the elderly patient. The interaction between aging and nutrition is complex because each may act on the other in either a synergistic or antagonistic fashion. Aging may alter the nutritional status of the elderly by affecting the way nutrients are absorbed and utilized by the body. Aging may also influence food intake and therefore nutritional status by decreasing the palatability of food. The environment of the elderly may change so they are less likely to eat well-balanced meals.

Nutrition in Aging Eleanor D. Schlenker, 1997 This text examines the sociological and physiological aspects of ageing and the manner in which they affect the nutritional needs of individuals. The coverage of the theories of ageing is updated and so provides a sound basis for understanding the process of ageing as a natural one. New findings in geriatric nutrition are discussed, ensuring that students have a current basis for their studies. The chapter on food selection patterns discusses how ethnic, social, and cultural patterns affect the likely response to dietary intervention and provides students with a guide as to how to approach future clients in order to ensure the greatest likelihood of a successful interaction. The updated chapter on drugs and nutrition provides a background to drug-nutrient interactions and polypharmacy Finding and Fighting Malnutrition in the Elderly United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Labor and Human Resources. Subcommittee on Aging, 1992 Longitudinal Evaluation of the National Nutrition Program for the Elderly Kirschner Associates, 1979 Abstract The Nutrition Program for the Elderly addresses dietary health and social problems of older persons. The first of 5 annual waves of evaluative data was obtained from 91 meal sites through interviews, project and site records, and observations. Included is a description of the program and local variations, an assessment of the impact of the program on participants and program characteristics which influence that impact. Differences are described among recent entrants, long-term participants, former participants, and non-participating neighbors. Specific impact variables such as nutritional and health status, isolation, life satisfaction, longevity, and independent living are examined. Other issues of concern include enrollment, relationship of outside social activity to program participation, level of participation, Area Agency role in nutrition projects, and delivery of support services in meals, transportation, recreation, nutrition education, shopping assistance.
