Bowlen, Typescript carbon narratives on various aspects of the history of the San Francisco Fire Department written and compiled by Frederick J Bowlen who served the S F F D as Battalion Chief and Department Historian The Lost Dream Mansel G. Blackford, 1993 Mansel Blackford's The Lost Dream explores the history of city planning in five Pacific Coast cities Seattle Portland Oakland San Francisco and Los Angeles during the Progressive Era Although city planning had diverse roots Blackford shows that much of the early planning originated with businessmen who viewed it as a way to shape their urban environments both economically and socially During the opening years of the twentieth century the business and political leaders in each of these cities began developing comprehensive city plans encompassing harbor improvements new street and transportation facilities civic centers and parks and boulevards As Blackford shows businessmen worked through both established political channels and newly formed bodies outside of those channels to become leaders in the planning process As the planning campaigns evolved businessmen found themselves both joined and opposed by ever changing coalitions of professionals politicians and workers The way that businessmen had previously interacted with these other parties greatly affected their success in obtaining their goals but ultimately Blackford claims politics lay at the heart of planning The proposed plans were accepted or rejected in heated citywide elections in which to be successful businessmen had to convince others to vote with them a feat they achieved in only one city Nevertheless these plans were often later adopted in some piecemeal fashion and Blackford concludes his study with an analysis of the legacy of Progressive Era city planning for later periods The Lost Dream makes significant contributions to our understanding of city planning in America and particularly in the American West San Francisco-Oakland Directory, 1907 The Longest Minute Matthew J.
