The Concept of Empathy and its Methods of Measurement. A Critique Sal Susu, 2021-01-27 Scientific Essay from the year 2020 in the subject Psychology Personality Psychology grade A language English abstract This work deals with the concept of empathy and critique of tests that are used to measure this concept The exact definition of the construct of empathy has been a subject of debate ever since the term was coined by Edward Titchener in 1909 He used the older German concept of Einfühlung which meant projecting one's feelings onto an external object In other words getting somebody to feel what one is currently feeling Titchener's concept of empathy was broader including the awareness of another person's affective state which includes their thoughts and emotions as well as sharing other people's feelings Another theorist Edmund Husserl defined empathy as putting oneself into the shoes of another person However George Herbert Mead's definition is the most basic one used today the ability to role take or understand another person s current situation and adjust one s own behaviour in response for example by acting prosocially Therefore at a broad level most definitions of empathy include an affective component that is feeling other peoples emotions which can be positive or negative For example feeling happy because somebody else is displaying outward signs or expressions of happiness such as laughter Empathy also includes a cognitive component which means pushing aside one s own current point of view and trying to see situations from another person s vantage point by using one s imagination

The Faceless Goddess Brenda L. Aranda Martinez,2016-12-15 Within everyones personal story is the presence of the Divine making Itself known In The Faceless Goddess Dreams Fantasies and Visions of a Feminine Nature the author tells the story of her own life experiences which is really a personal journey in search for the Divine in her own life As a child and an adolescent the author is not aware that the journey is taking place As an adult though she begins to realize that something extraordinary is taking place when she begins to ask questions such as Who am I and What purpose and meaning does life hold for me Over time and with much introspection through dreams fantasies and visions as well as with her work with the archetypes the author begins to realize that her search for the Divine is really a search for her True Self She also discovers that by finding her True Self she will also find the purpose and meaning to the life she is living Eventually she comes to the conclusion that life itself is an expression of the Divine in the living world And that humans experiences are a living testimony that the Sacred and the Divine are ever present in the world around them and within their very being

Ethics and the Autonomy of Philosophy Bernard James Walker,2014-11-06 In Ethics and the Autonomy of Philosophy Bernard Walker sets out with two objectives First Walker argues that ethics is autonomous as a discipline Oftentimes ethics books from a Christian perspective lean toward grounding ethics in theology or in biblical proof texting Walker departs from this tradition Ethics grounded in theology entails a limited scope for those doing ethics in that the Christian God must be assumed for both Christian and non Christian when at the table of ethical dialogue For the non Christian this loads the dice and shuts down ethical consensus and dialogue if not ethical truth With that said this book does not depart from Christian ethical views on such issues as the sanctity of life antiracism the death penalty the objectivity of ethics and the importance of integrating faith into ethics however Walker does so from a common denominator of philosophy rather than theology Second Walker ventures into the streets and engages the man woman on the streets approach to ethics and ethical decision making He points out the shortcomings of the ubiquitous views of the man woman on the streets viz cultural relativism skepticism and the attitude that ethics is merely a matter of personal choice
