Introducing Policework Mike Brogden, Tony Jefferson, Sandra Walklate, 2023-03-31 Originally published in 1988 Introducing Policework offered a new and concise overview of the controversial subject of policework at the time The authors provide critical evaluations of the contributions made by psychologists social psychologists historians sociologists and political scientists and an assessment of how these fit within an overall understanding of policework Among the issues considered are the process of socialization that lead to a cop culture the historical evolution of police working practices and their current impact upon the social divisions of age gender race and class problems with the present system of accountability the prospects for success of recent post Scarman initiatives such as community consultation The achievement of this book is that it provides lively and consistent discussion of key issues in the consideration of policework race and crime the question of gender victimization and the new realism police monitoring Neighbourhood Watch and police training initiatives Today it will provide an interesting look back at a critical evaluation of policework in the 1980s

The Policing Web Jean-Paul Brodeur, 2010-09-30 In this comprehensive study Jean Paul Brodeur examines the diversity of the policing web Policing agencies such as criminal investigation units intelligence services private security companies and military policing organizations are examined in addition to public uniformed police to show the extent to which policing extends far beyond the confines of public police working in uniform and visible to all The study also includes a consideration of military policing both when compatible with the values of democracy and when in opposition It also examines criminal organizations enforcing their own rules in urban zones deserted by the police and criminal individuals acting as police informants since they too are part of the policing web even though they do not qualify as legitimate policing agents or agencies The underlying argument of The Policing Web is that the diverse strands of the policing web are united by a common definition that emphasizes the licence granted to policing agencies to use either legally or with complete impunity means that are otherwise prohibited as crimes to the rest of the population This claim is argued for throughout the book and its paradoxical consequences investigated Although much effort is devoted to presenting a comprehensive model linking all the components of policing it is acknowledged that the policing web is by no means a neat and well integrated structure Even the belief that it will develop into a tightly coordinated system is in itself questionable Indeed the study shows that there is not just one policing web but several depending on the country police history and culture and the images of policing which shape the mind of the community These often overlooked factors are nonetheless essential components of the context of policing and are discussed within an international framework

Drug smuggler nation Stephen Snelders, 2021-02-09 Why did the international drug regulatory regime of the twentieth century fail to stop an explosive increase in trade and consumption of illegal drugs This study investigates the histories of smugglers and criminal entrepreneurs in the Netherlands who succeeded in turning the country into the so called Colombia of Europe or the international drug supermarket Increasing state regulations and interventions led to the proliferation of a hydra of small anarchic groups and networks ideally suited to circumvent the enforcement of regulation Networks of smugglers and suppliers of heroin cocaine cannabis XTC and other drugs were organized without a strict formal hierarchy and based on personal relations and cultural affinities rather than on institutional arrangements These networks created a thriving underground industry of illegal synthetic drug laboratories and indoor cannabis cultivation in the Netherlands itself Their operations were made possible and developed because of the deep historical social and cultural embeddedness of criminal anarchy in Dutch society Using examples from the rich history of drug smuggling Drug smuggler nation investigates the deeper and hidden grounds of the illegal drug trade and its effects on our drug policies

Interpreting Policework Roger Grimshaw, Tony Jefferson, 2023-03-31 In the 1980s there existed wide and often acrimonious disagreement over the purposes and objectives of police organizations the ways in which their activities were structured and their relations with the wider society Interpreting policework requires a rounded conception of policing based on both a thorough critique of the main theoretical trends in police sociology and close familiarity with actual patterns of policing on the streets in the stations and inside the police headquarters where key policies are formulated Originally published in 1987 the achievement of this book is that it combines rigorous theoretical analysis with a wealth of descriptive material drawn from first hand observation of policing and decision making at all levels and thus relates sociological theory to practice and political debate at the time The introduction provides a careful analysis of central theoretical and political strands in police sociology and proposes a new general conception of policework The authors go on to provide vivid illustrations of this conception from the worlds of uniformed unit beat patrols and resident beat officers and from the fora in which policy for operational practice is considered A final section draws the wider lessons of these concrete analyses for sociological theory and for our understanding of past policy shifts from one form of beatwork to another and spells out the radical implications of the study for the political debate on the future of policing Interpreting Policework thus had relevance to students and researchers in police studies sociology public policy and the law at the time and will still be of historical interest today The authors are experienced researchers practised in investigating a wide range of criminological and social control issues
