Policing The Risk Society:

Policing the Risk Society Richard V. Ericson, Kevin D. Haggerty, 1997-01-01 Ericson and Haggerty contend that the police have become information brokers to institutions such as insurance companies and health and welfare organizations that operate based on a knowledge of risk

Policing the Risk Society Richard Victor Ericson, Kevin D. Haggerty, 1997 The information age has left few of us untouched individuals and institutions alike have undergone radical transformations in the race to get the most out of new technologies The police are no exception Policing the Risk Society introduces us to a shocking new vision of police work in which information gathered by the police with surveillance and data collection technologies is brokered to other institutions Richard Ericson and Kevin Haggerty contend that the police have become information brokers to institutions such as insurance companies and health and welfare organizations whose operations are based on a knowledge of risk These institutions influence the ways in which police officers think and act A critical review of existing research reveals the need to study police interaction with institutions as well as with individuals These institutions are part of an emerging risk society where knowledge of risk is used to control danger The authors examine different aspects of police involvement the use of surveillance technologies and the collection of data on securities careers and different social ethnic age and gender groups They conclude by looking at how police organizations have been forced to bureaucratize and to continually adapt rules formats and technologies of communication to meet external demands for knowledge of risk With this book Ericson and Haggerty revolutionize the study of policing and for the first time provide concrete evidence of the central tenets of risk society theory Their work will have a major impact not only on scholars in criminology social theory and communications but on policing as well Awarded the 1998 Herbert Jacob Book Prize by its Committee of the Law and Society Association University of Massachusetts

Policing the Risk Society Richard Victor Ericson, Kevin D. Haggerty, 1997 The focus of this book is the policing of modern society and the risks involved It explores various issues and factors effecting policing communities particularly communication and police organization

Does Policing the Risk Society Hold the Road Risk? Jérôme Ferret, 2010 Ericson and Haggerty's book Policing the Risk Society 1997 sets out to annul Bittner's classical coercion based reading of the police and replace it with a radically new paradigm that foregrounds the panoptical or knowledge work dimension of the police and its potential to serve the interests of non police social disciplinary institutions In this article we test this neo Foucauldian paradigm on the basis of a body of research into road traffic policing As a result we observe that though non police owner managers of new risks challenge the societal immanence centrality and publicness of police organizations with time these challenges fail We therefore argue that Ericson and Haggerty's notion of panoptical policing should be taken as a theoretical innovation which far from eliminating Bittner's paradigm enhances it with a new force

Terrorism, Risk, and the City Jon Coaffee, 2003 The development of defensive strategies encompassing the fortification and privatization of the city has attracted significant attention during recent years and has become particularly relevant in the aftermath of September 11th Dealing with issues of risk security and the spatial restructuring of contemporary western cities this book examines how the perceived risk of terrorist attack led to changes in the physical form and institutional infrastructure of the city of London during the 1990s when the city was a prime terrorist target The book analyses how the various formal and informal strategies adopted in the City attempted to reduce both the physical and financial risk of terrorism This was undertaken through a series of place specific security initiatives and risk management policies which led to increased fortification a substantial rise in terrorism insurance premiums and changing institutional relations at a variety of spatial scales It also argues that the security measures deployed were developed not in terms of an anti terrorist effort but in relation to the unintended by products of these approaches such as crime reduction and enhanced traffic management capabilities

Police Science Perspectives Francisco del Barrio Romero, 2009 Due to developments in crime public disorder and society in general police forces across Europe are increasingly confronted with cross border cases As a result the need for police cooperation intensifies and more and more police practice is based on scientific knowledge CEPOL asked a group of experts from six European countries to reflect on these developments Why do senior police officers need research and science What kind of scientific knowledge fits their professional framework How do they make use of it The report including expert commentaries ventures to provide some answers by exploring key questions and aims to open a further discussion about modern day police science and potential paths towards a European approach Surveillance Society David Lyon, 2001

Kraska,2001 Controlling threats to national security has long been the mission of the U S military while civilian law enforcement has dealt with domestic problems of crime illegal drugs and internal disorder This groundbreaking collection argues persuasively that the conventional distinctions between these two forces are becoming blurred and considers the far reaching consequences of the disquieting trend to militarize the nation s criminal justice system The contributors examine the historical and current interrelationships between the military and police illuminating such areas as the ideological similarities between waging real wars and fighting the wars on drugs and crime the reshaping of the military s role after the end of the Cold War the rapidly growing influence of advanced military technology in civilian society and the adaptation of military models such as boot camps and SWAT teams in policing and corrections As the lines between the military industrial complex and the criminal justice enterprise become ever more clouded this work provides a much needed evaluation of the thorny issues dangers and public policy ramifications raised by the entanglement between militari Crime and Security Benjamin Jervis Goold,Lucia Zedner,2006 The articles in this volume reflect the range and variety of debates surrounding the issue of security The address the very concept of security and explore its origins in the literature of criminology They also examine the relationship between the provision of security as a fundamental justification of state power The Fabrication of Social

Order Mark Neocleous, 2000-06-20 Anyone who considers questions of power cannot help but be struck by the ubiquitous nature emotional force and political pull of the concept of order The Fabrication of Social Order examines the role of policing in the fabrication of order After an initial exploration of the original relationship between police state power and the question of order Neocleous focuses on the ways in which eighteenth century liberalism refined and narrowed the concept of the police a process which masked the power of capital and broader issues of social control In doing so he challenges the way liberalism came to define policing solely in terms of the question of crime and the rule of law This liberal definition created a limited and fundamentally misleading understanding of policing which remains in use today In contrast Neocleous argues for an expanded concept of police adequate to the expansive set of institutions through which policing takes place These institutions are concerned not just with the maintenance or reproduction of order but with its fabrication especially the fabrication of a social order based on wage labour This project he argues should be understood as the project of social security Grasping this point allows a fuller understanding of the ways in which the state polices and secures civil society and how order is fabricated through law and administration
