inequality is a problem that needs to be addressed Yet inequality policy is notoriously complex and contested This book approaches the issue from two linked perspectives First a focus on functional requirements highlights what policymakers think they need to deliver policy successfully and the gap between their requirements and reality We identify this gap in relation to the theory and practice of policy learning and to multiple sectors to show how it manifests in health education and gender equity policies Second a focus on territorial politics highlights how the problem is interpreted at different scales subject to competing demands to take responsibility This contestation and spread of responsibilities contributes to different policy approaches across spatial scales We conclude that governments promote many separate equity initiatives across territories and sectors without knowing if they are complementary or contradictory This outcome could reflect the fact that ambiguous policy problems and complex policymaking processes are beyond the full knowledge or control of governments It could also be part of a strategy to make a rhetorically radical case while knowing that they will translate into safer policies It allows them to replace debates on values regarding whose definition of equity matters and which inequalities to tolerate with more technical discussions of policy processes Governments may be offering new perspectives on spatial justice or new ways Cooperation and Conflict between State and Local Government Russell L. to reduce political attention to inequalities Hanson, Eric S.
