Political Parties In South Asia:

Parties and Political Change in South Asia James Chiriyankandath, 2016-04-14 Over the past seven decades and more political parties have become an essential feature of the political landscape of the South Asian subcontinent serving both as a conduit and product of the tumultuous change the region has experienced Yet they have not been the focus of sustained scholarly attention This collection focuses on different aspects of how major parties have been agents of and subject to change in three South Asian states India Pakistan and Sri Lanka examining some of the apparent paradoxes of politics in the subcontinent and covering issues such as gender religion patronage clientelism political recruitment and democratic regression Recurring themes are the importance of personalities and the corresponding neglect of institutionalisation and the lack of pluralism in intraparty affairs factors that render parties and political systems vulnerable to degeneration This book was published as a special issue of Commonwealth and Comparative Politics

Political Parties, Party Systems and Democratisation in East Asia Liang Fook Lye, Wilhelm Hofmeister, 2011. Some fledgling democracies in the world have encountered setbacks due to political parties trying to grapple with the expectations of sophisticated electorates and introducing gradual political reforms over the years. This book describes how democracy is evolving in East Asia and how it assumes different forms in different countries with political parties adapting and evolving alongside. It has a two-fold intent. First, it contends that the existing variety of party systems in East Asia will endure and may even flourish rather than converge as liberal democracies. Second, it highlights the seeming political durability of one-party systems unlike two-party or multi-party systems in the US and Europe and their enduring predominance in countries such as Cambodia, China, Singapore and Vietnam.

Party Politics in Southeast Asia Dirk Tomsa, Andreas Ufen, 2013. Contributing to the growing discourse on political parties in Asia, this book looks at parties in Southeast Asia's most competitive electoral democracies of Indonesia, Thailand and the Philippines. It highlights the diverse dynamics of party politics in the region and provides new insights into organizational structures, mobilizational strategies and the multiple dimensions of linkages between political parties and their voters. The book focuses on the prominence of clientelistic practices and strategies both within parties as well as between parties and their voters. It demonstrates that clientelism is extremely versatile and can take many forms ranging from traditional personalized relationships between a patron and a client to the modern incarnations of broker-driven network clientelism that is often based on more anonymous relations. The book also discusses how contemporary political parties often combine clientelistic practices with more formal patterns of organization and communication, thus raising questions about neat analytical dichotomies. Straddling the intersection between political science and area studies, this book is of interest to students and scholars of contemporary Southeast Asian politics and political scientists and Asian Studies specialists with a broader research interest in comparative democratization studies.
