

21 Developing Behavior Change Interventions

Nelli Hankonen and Wendy Hardeman

Practical Summary

When trying to help people change behavior, it is important that intervention designers consider carefully what actions might bring about the desired outcomes and why. A systematic approach to intervention development aids this process. Key tasks are (1) identify and analyze the problem addressed by the intervention; (2) identify how the intervention will achieve the desired outcomes, decide on its content and delivery mode(s), and design a logic model or program theory; (3) develop intervention materials or prototypes (e.g., interface); and (4) test or pilot the intervention iteratively in an early stage. This approach can be adopted to develop new interventions and to optimize existing interventions. It is useful to build an explicit model of assumed influences of an intervention during its design, including influences on behavior, contextual influences on implementation, and the causal pathway involved. The decisions about intervention content and delivery modes are informed by an understanding of the target group, behaviors, context, and working mechanisms of behavior change techniques.

21.1 Introduction

Intervention development is an essential process in which several parties work together to produce an intervention that is fit-for-purpose and likely to be effective in changing the behavior of the target population. Parties involved are likely to include practitioners, researchers, the target group, and other stakeholders (see also Chapters 24 and 25, this volume). The scope of development work is influenced by the available time and resources. The aim of this chapter is to provide an overview of the basic steps in the intervention development process. The chapter shows how careful development helps ensure that the intervention is (1) informed by evidence from multiple sources (e.g., the research literature, the target group or population, stakeholders, relevant theory); (2) that the intervention is an appropriate solution to a problem; (3) that context and any challenges in the implementation of the intervention have been carefully considered and addressed; (4) that feasibility, acceptability, and resource use (value for money) have been considered at an early stage; (5) that the intervention is optimized prior to evaluation; and (6) that the evaluation will focus on key uncertainties about the intervention. A carefully reported development process is also crucial in understanding issues arising from intervention implementation, such as providing insight into what may have gone wrong if the intervention does not achieve stipulated goals or is labeled as “ineffective.” It also provides necessary detail to contribute to the evidence base of behavioral interventions and behavior change theories. The chapter will focus on the development of behavior change interventions across disciplines and

Exploring the Interaction between Health-promoting and Health Risk Behaviors in Health, volume II Huixuan Zhou,Feng Jiang,Yi-lang Tang,2025-09-15 Health related behaviors play positive or negative roles in people s health For instance health risk behaviors such as sedentary behaviors e g binge watching TV and playing computer games the use of alcohol tobacco or other substances and lack of sleep have been found to negatively affect the physical and mental health of people On the other hand some studies show that health promoting behaviors such as physical activity and healthy dietary habits can mitigate or reverse the negative effects of health risk behaviors on health outcomes In the meantime some studies indicate that the harmful effects of some health risk behaviors may not be mitigated by health promoting behaviors For instance some studies show that sedentary behaviors and physical activity are independently associated with some physical and mental health outcomes interventions to increase physical activity with and without decreasing sedentary time lead to different health outcomes Clearly more research is needed to show the interaction between health promoting behaviors and health risk behaviors in health which could shed light on the management of health related behaviors
