Alternative Agriculture: A History Joan Thirsk,1997-10-09 People like to believe in a past golden age of traditional

English countryside before large farms machinery and the destruction of hedgerows changed the landscape forever However that countryside may have looked both more and less familiar than we imagine Take today's startling yellow fields of rapeseed seemingly more suited to the landscape of Van Gogh than Constable They were in fact thoroughly familiar to fieldworkers in seventeenth century England At the same time some features that would have gone unremarked in the past now seem like oddities In the fifteenth century rabbit warrens were specially guarded to rear rabbits as a luxury food for rich men's tables whilst houses had moats not only to defend them but to provide a source of fresh fish In the 1500s we find Catherine of Aragon introducing the concept of a fresh salad to the court of Henry VIII and in the 1600s artichoke gardens became a fashion of the gentry in their hope of producing more male heirs The common tomato suspected of being poisonous in 1837 was transformed into a household vegetable by the end of the nineteenth century thanks to cheaper glass making methods and the resulting increase in glasshouses In addition to these images of past lives Joan Thirsk reveals how the forces which drive our current interest in alternative forms of agriculture a glut of meat and cereal crops changing dietary habits the needs of medicine have striking parallels with earlier periods in our history She warns us that today's decisions should not be made in a historical vacuum we can find solutions to our current problems in the experience of people in the past
