A Culture of Improvement Robert Friedel,2010-02-26 How technological change in the West has been driven by the pursuit of improvement a history of technology from plows and printing presses to penicillin the atomic bomb and the computer Why does technology change over time how does it change and what difference does it make In this sweeping ambitious look at a thousand years of Western experience Robert Friedel argues that technological change comes largely through the pursuit of improvement the deep rooted belief that things could be done in a better way What Friedel calls the culture of improvement is manifested every day in the ways people carry out their tasks in life from tilling fields and raising children to waging war

Improvements can be ephemeral or lasting and one person's improvement may not always be viewed as such by others. Friedel stresses the social processes by which we define what improvements are and decide which improvements will last and which will not. These processes he emphasizes have created both winners and losers in history. Friedel presents a series of narratives of Western technology that begin in the eleventh century and stretch into the twenty-first. Familiar figures from the history of invention are joined by others: the Italian preacher who described the first eyeglasses, the dairywomen displaced from their control over cheesemaking, and the little-known engineer who first suggested a grand tower to Gustav Eiffel. Friedel traces technology from the plow and the printing press to the internal combustion engine, the transistor, and the space shuttle. Friedel also reminds us that faith in improvement can sometimes have horrific consequences: as improved weaponry makes warfare ever more deadly, and the drive for improving human beings can lead to eugenics and even genocide. The most comprehensive attempt to tell the story of Western technology in many years, engagingly written and lavishly illustrated, A Culture of Improvement documents the ways in which the drive for improvement has shaped our modern world.

Fiction and the Frontiers of Knowledge in Europe, 1500-1800 Richard Scholar, Alexis Tadié, 2016-04-15. The uses of fiction in early modern Europe are far more varied than is often assumed by those who consider fiction to be synonymous with the novel. The contributors to this volume demonstrate the significant role that fiction plays in early modern European culture, not only in a variety of its literary genres but also in its formation of philosophical ideas, political theories, and the law. The volume explores these uses of fiction in a series of interrelated case studies ranging from the Italian Renaissance to the French Revolution, and examining the work of, among others, Montaigne, Corneille, Descartes, Hobbes, Locke, and Diderot. It asks: Where does fiction live and thrive? Under what conditions, and to what ends? It suggests that fiction is best understood not as a genre or a discipline but instead as a frontier one that demarcates literary genres and disciplines of knowledge and which crucially allows for the circulation of ideas between them.

Models in Archaeology David L. Clarke, 2014-10-24 This major study reflects the increasing significance of careful model formation and testing in those academic subjects that are struggling from intuitive and aesthetic obscurantism toward a more disciplined and integrated approach to their fields of study The twenty six original contributions represent the carefully selected work of progressive archaeologists around the world covering the use of models on archaeological material of all kinds and from all periods from Palaeolithic to Medieval Their common theme is archaeological generalisation by means of explicit model building testing modification and reapplication The contributors seek to show that it is the use of certain models in particular ways that defines archaeology as the practice of one discipline with a set of general tenets that are as applicable in Peru as in Persia Australia as Alaska Sweden as Scotland on material from the second millennium B C to the second millennium A D They assert that careful model formulation within archaeology and the cautious exchange and testing of models within and beyond the discipline provides the only route to the formation of the common internationally valid body of theory which defines a vigorous and coherent discipline and distinguishes it from being a collection of merely regionally applicable special cases
