The Victorian Frame of Mind, 1830-1870 Walter E. Houghton, 2014-10-29 It is now forty years since Lytton Strachey decided that we knew too much about the Victorian era to view its culture as a whole Recently the tide has turned and the Victorians have been the subject of sympathetic period pieces critical and biographical works and extensive studies of their age but the Victorian mind itself remains blurred for us a bundle of various and often paradoxical ideas and attitudes Mr Houghton explores these ideas and attitudes studies their interrelationships and traces their simultaneous existence to the general character of the age His inquiry is the more important because it demonstrates that to look into the Victorian mind is to see some of the primary sources of the modern mind become a significant dimension in social science analysis In many developed countries economic growth is slowing down and in some cases restrained due to environmental considerations and the real question is the optimum spread of development over space rather than the growth over time In the developing countries limited and uneven distribution of population and resources and the existence of heterogeneous groups highlighted the need of balanced regional development The energy crisis and the realization that energy resources are very limited and unequally distributed have further emphasized its importance The expected impact and relocation due to energy shortages will have a crucial spatial dimension since manufacturing and service activities dependent on energy are concentrated in a few metropolitan regions connected by transportation communication and cultural factors Regional environment is also dependent on the spatial juxtaposition of activities and energy use The papers included in this volume address some of these considerations They were presented in the International Conference on Regional Science Energy and Environment held at Katholieke Universiteit te Leuven Belgium on May 1975 A second volume titled Environment Regional Science and Interregional Modeling published also by Springer Verlag contains research papers related to environment and space This book does not concern all facets of the energy situation In fact contributions on major oil producing countries U S S R East European and developing countries are not represented American Book Publishing Record ,1988
