Informer 1935 The Academy Award winning score for Now Voyager reflects the maturation of the composer's understanding of the dramatic function of music in film. The primary resources incorporated in the analysis include from the Max Steiner collection at Brigham Young University Steiner's letters and scrapbooks and his unpublished autobiography Notes to You. In addition to contributing to the composer's own perspective on the music for this film and on scoring practice in general, these papers contribute to a broader debate about how films are interpreted and the part music plays in these schemes of criticism. This study of the film score occurs within the broader theoretical and historical debates currently characterizing film musicology and explores from varied perspectives how the score is meaningful and important to the film. Devoted to a single score, this study brings together for analysis all the contingent factors in the score's creation, use, and reception and will appeal to film music scholars and to scholars of music and of film. The scope of the analysis will also interest scholars involved in music in multi-disciplinary art forms, feminist musicologists, and film scholars and students of musical theater. Separate chapters discuss Steiner's musical background, his technique of film scoring, historical and critical contexts of the film, the music and its context, and an analysis of the score. Musical examples illustrate the text, and an appendix of selected film scores by Steiner is included along with a selected bibliography.

Amateur Film Scoring and the Process David Martinez, 2019. Amateur Film Scoring and the Process is a selection of my experiences working with fellow Cal State LA students. Each film that I worked on was approached in a unique way; consequently, each composition was unique. This might have been because of my skill level, the varying types of interactions with directors, or because it was my first time scoring a particular style of film. Five films are chosen because of their importance towards my growth as a film composer. Through these works, I feel I am best represented up to this point in my career. Each film was a wonderful experience that I was fortunate enough to score. Perhaps the most important thing is how these films helped me grow in more ways than just compositionally. What started out as a love of film music and a personal goal to earn a Master of Music degree quickly turned into a strong desire to be the go-to music student for all of the Film and Television majors. I used every opportunity I had to learn and to grow, and this thesis gives the reader a glimpse into my time at Cal State LA.

The Encyclopedia of Film Composers Thomas S. Hischak, 2015-04-16. For more than a century, original music has been composed for the cinema. From the early days when live music accompanied silent films to the present in which a composer can draw upon a full orchestra or a lone synthesizer to embody a composition, music has been an integral element of most films. By the late 1930s, movie studios had established music departments, and some of the greatest names in film music emerged during Hollywood's Golden Age, including Alfred Newman, Max Steiner, Dimitri Tiomkin, and Bernard Herrmann. Over the decades, other creators of screen music offered additional memorable scores, and some composers such as Henry Mancini, Randy Newman, and John Williams have become household names. The Encyclopedia of Film Composers features entries on more than 250 movie composers from around the world. It not only provides facts about these artists but also explains what makes each composer notable and discusses his or her music in detail Each entry includes Biographical material Important dates Career highlights Analysis of the composer's musical style Complete list of movie credits This book brings recognition to the many men and women who have written music for movies over the past one hundred years In addition to composers from the United States and Great Britain artists from dozens of other countries are also represented A rich resource of movie music history The Encyclopedia of Film Composers will be of interest to fans of cinema in general as well as those who want to learn more about the many talented individuals who have created memorable scores

The Film Experience Timothy Corrigan, Patricia White, 2012-01-03 A comprehensive introduction to film that recognizes students as movie fans and helps them understand the art form's full scope The authors situate their strong coverage of the medium's formal elements within the larger cultural contexts that inform the ways we watch film from economics and exhibition to marketing and the star system Blackwells
