Fishing in Europe, 2004 Halsbury's Statutory Instruments Great Britain, 1986 Singing the Gospel along Scotland's North-East Coast, 1859-2009 Frances Wilkins, 2018-01-17 Following three years of ethnomusicological fieldwork on the sacred singing traditions of evangelical Christians in North East Scotland and Northern Isles coastal communities Frances Wilkins documents and analyses current singing practices in this book by placing them historically and contemporaneously within their respective faith communities In ascertaining who the singers were and why when where how and what they chose to sing the study explores a number of related questions How has sacred singing contributed to the establishment and reinforcement of individual and group identities both in the church and wider community What is the process by which specific regional repertoires and styles develop Which organisations and venues have been particularly conducive to the development of sacred singing in the community How does the subject matter of songs relate to the immediate environment of coastal inhabitants How and why has gospel singing in coastal communities changed These questions are answered with comprehensive reference to interview material fieldnotes videography and audio field recordings As one of the first pieces of ethnomusicological research into sacred music performance in Scotland this ethnography draws important parallels between practices in the North East and elsewhere in the British Isles and across the globe Lexical Variation and Attrition in the Scottish Fishing Communities Robert McColl Millar, 2014-06-04 This book considers various theoretical and methodological issues in relation to a representative sample of fishing communities along Scotland's east coast Can the lexical variation and change found in these communities be perceived as primary evidence

Structural Change in Fisheries Dealing with the Human Dimension OECD, 2007-09-14 This conference proceedings analyses the social issues and policy challenges that arise from fisheries adjustment policies and how OECD member countries are meeting those challenges UK FISHING VESSELS 2015 JOHN EATON, 2012-10-05 An alphabetical listing of all UK fishing boats with cross check indexes for fishing codes port of registration year and place built and overall length Proceedings of the Second International Fishing Industry Safety and Health Conference, September 22-24, 2003, Sitka, Alaska, U.S.A. George A. Conway, Nicolle A. Mode, Priscilla Wopat, 2006 Fishing for Souls Stephen Friend, 2018-09-27 Fishing for Souls explores the origins and development of fishermen's missions in Britain focussing particularly on the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries This book is the first to view the entire picture of a significant although not broadly known part of British history and to add new relevant perspectives Dr Stephen Friend FRSA establishes an historical outline of the development of the churches work among British fishing communities and explores why a mission specifically concerned with fishermen was not initiated until the industry entered a period of economic decline during the early 1880s. The factors relating to the development of British fishermen's missions are complex, involving not only social and technological changes inside and outside the fishing industry but also changing theological perceptions that had a significant impact on attitudes to social conditions. With its honesty and objectivity about developments, especially those that were difficult and painful for the fishermen's mission societies at the time, Fishing for Souls reveals the magnificent work that the various societies did and in some cases continue to do, making it evident to all the readers.

Marine Biotoxins Hans P. Egmond, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2004. This paper provides an extensive review of different aspects of five shellfish poisoning syndromes: paralytic, diarrhoeic, amnesic, neurologic, and azaspiracid, as well as one fish poisoning syndrome, ciguatera. It discusses in detail the causative toxins produced by marine organisms, their chemical structures, and analytical methods. It also covers the habitat and occurrence of the toxin-producing organisms, case studies, and existing regulations. Based on this analysis, risk assessments are carried out for each of the toxins, and recommendations are elaborated to improve the management of these risks in order to reduce the harmful effect of these toxins on public health.

A special chapter on policy coherence for development in fisheries is included.

A Short History of Britain's Fisheries Mike Smylie, 2024-02-22. Wherever you fit into the debate about food—vegan, vegetarian, pescatarian, flexitarian, or carnivore—you cannot argue against the fact that fish have influenced our diet for millennia and for many continue to do so today. We are, after all, an island nation surrounded by seas that were once extremely rich and diverse in their variety of both fish and shellfish, and it's well known that early man was as much a hunter-gatherer on water as on land, for fish are a great supplier of protein. Yet only in the last couple of centuries has fishing become an established occupation, and the last forty years have seen a multitude of change in what is now an industry. Outside the industry, little has been written about how this seafood is caught, landed, and then reaches us the consumer. We all know about fish and chip shops, but do we know the difference between a beam and otter trawl? What is the difference between a lobster pot and a lobster creel? Did you know oysters and salmon were once caught in such huge amounts they were regarded as poor man's food? We all like ambling around colorful fishing harbors, gazing at the boats, but just how much do we know about those that go out in such a dangerous environment and bring back the catch? With fish much talked about in today's news alongside the unhealthy state of the oceans, here we have the definitive guide to Britain's commercial fisheries.

Political Economy of the Environment Simon Dietz,Jonathan Michie,Christine Oughton,2011-02-01 This book is the culmination of several years work by a group of academics policy makers and other professionals looking to understand how alternative economic thinking and indeed thinking from quite different social scientific disciplines could enhance the mainstream economic approach to environmental and natural resource problems Of the editors Dietz comes from the mainstream economics tradition while Michie and Oughton draw explicitly on institutional and evolutionary economics The various authors represent a range of disciplinary backgrounds and approaches This book draws on the strengths of each and all of these approaches to analyse environmental issues and what can be done to tackle these through corporate and public policy The book argues that the need for an inter disciplinary approach Two themes which emerge repeatedly throughout the book are the need for an interdisciplinary theory of technological change and the need for a similarly interdisciplinary approach to the study of human behaviour and how it influences both production and consumption choices The two themes are of course related Resolving environmental questions requires an understanding of their nature of their causes and to the extent that they are anthropogenic of how to change human behaviour These fundamental issues are the focus of the four chapters that form Part 1 of this volume The remainder of the volume develops them in more detail
