Policing the Victorian Town D. Taylor, 2002-07-23 The book looks at the development of policing in a town noted for its high levels of crime Through a detailed study of policing and police work over the period c 1840 1914 it shows how the turbulent community of the early Victorian years was turned into a policed society by the end of the century Assaulting the Past Katherine D. Watson, 2009-03-26 This book offers an important contribution to the comparative history of interpersonal violence since the early modern period a subject of great contemporary and historical importance Its overarching theme is Norbert Elias s theory of the civilizing process and the chapters in the book recognise as he did that changes in human behaviour are related to transformations of both social and personality structures Drawing on a vast range of archival and written records from five countries the contributors explore the usefulness of the theory the subject of much debate over the past two decades to explaining long term patterns in violence but also point to the need for further empirical and comparative studies to reflect current thinking and developments within historical criminological and sociological methodologies In approaching the subject from a variety of perspectives Assaulting the Past Violence and Civilization in Historical Context presents a comparative and qualitative assessment of violent behaviour and the experience of violence Approaches used include the empirical and the theoretical and the book is strongly interdisciplinary drawing on the history of crime history of medicine criminology and legal history The volume seeks to offer new insights on violence the individual and society to further illuminate the links between state formation social interdependency and self discipline that are so integral to the theory of the civilizing process

The Future of Policing Jennifer M. Brown, 2013-10-08 The police service in England and Wales is facing major challenges in its financing political oversight and reorganisation of its structures Current economic conditions have created a wholly new environment whereby cost saving is permitting hitherto unthinkable changes in the style and means of delivery of policing services In the context of these proposed changes Lord Stevens formerly Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police Service was asked to chair an Independent Commission looking into the future of policing The Commission has a wide ranging remit and the papers in this book offer up to date analysis of contemporary problems from the novel perspective of developing a reform agenda to assist the Commission Bringing together contributions from both key academic thinkers and police professionals this book discusses new policing paradigms lays out a case for an evidence based practice approach and draws attention to developing areas such as terrorism public order and hate crime Policing is too important to be left to politicians as the health of a democracy may be judged by the relationship between the police and the public The aim of this book is to question and present analyses of problems offer new ideas and propose realistically achievable solutions without being so timid as to preserve the status quo It will be of interest to both academics and students in the fields of criminology and policing studies as well as professionals in the policing service NGOs and local authority organisations

Crime Control and Everyday Life in the Victorian City David Churchill, 2017-12-29 The history of modern crime control is usually presented as a narrative of how the state wrested control over the governance of crime from the civilian public. Most accounts trace the decline of a participatory discretionary culture of crime control in the early modern era and its replacement by a centralized bureaucratic system of responding to offending. The formation of the new professional police forces in the nineteenth century is central to this narrative; henceforth it is claimed the priorities of criminal justice were to be set by the state as ordinary people lost what authority they had once exercised over dealing with offenders. This book challenges this established view and presents a fundamental reinterpretation of changes to crime control in the age of the new police. It breaks new ground by providing a highly detailed empirical analysis of everyday crime control in Victorian provincial cities, revealing the tremendous activity which ordinary people displayed in responding to crime alongside a rich survey of police organization and policing in practice. With unique conceptual clarity it seeks to reorient modern criminal justice history away from its established preoccupation with state systems of policing and punishment and move towards a more nuanced analysis of the governance of crime. More widely the book provides a unique and valuable vantage point from which to rethink the role of civil society and the state in modern governance, the nature of agency and authority in Victorian England and the historical antecedents of pluralized modes of crime control which characterize contemporary society.

European Police Forces and Law Enforcement in the First World War Jonas

Campion, Laurent López, Guillaume Payen, 2019-11-08 This book offers a global history of civilian military and gendarmerie style policing around the First World War. Whilst many aspects of the Great War have been revisited in light of the centenary and in spite of the recent growth of modern policing history the role and fate of police forces in the conflict has been largely forgotten. Yet the war affected all European and extra European police forces. Despite their diversity all were confronted with transnational factors and forms of disorder and suffered generally from mass conscription. During the conflict societies and states were faced with a crisis situation of unprecedented magnitude with mass mechanised killing on the battle field and starvation, occupation, destruction and in some cases even revolution on the home front. Based on a wide geographical and chronological scope from the late nineteenth century to the interwar years this collection of essays explores the policing of European belligerent countries alongside their empires and neutral countries. The book's approach crosses traditional boundaries between neutral and belligerent nations, centres and peripheries and frontline and rear areas. It focuses on the involvement and wartime transformations of these law enforcement forces, thus highlighting underlying changes in police organisation, identity and practices across this period.

Police Courts in Nineteenth-Century Scotland, Volume 1 David G.

Barrie, Susan Broomhall, 2016-04-22 Taking the form of two companion volumes Police Courts in Nineteenth Century Scotland represents the first major investigation into the administration, experience, impact and representation of summary justice in Scottish towns c. 1800 to 1892. Each volume explores diverse but complementary themes relating to judicial practices, relationships, experiences and discourses through the lens of the same subject matter: the police court. Volume 1 with the examines the largely unexplored social and cultural history of Middlesbrough and the leisure habits and opportunities of its people. It adds to existing studies of urban Britain and provides a specific study on the relationship between leisure and urbanization and industrialization. The book furthers understanding of urban sport and urban history by demonstrating how sport can be shaped by urban growth, whether directly or indirectly, and equally how sport can also affect the way in which a town develops. This book shows how the study of sport in a particular setting provides another means of examining relationships between different social groups and within a large urban landscape. This book views the town's sporting history alongside the development of Middlesbrough itself and within the context of the growth of sport in Britain more widely. Furthermore, as a study in urban history, this book addresses existing gaps in our knowledge of the development of towns and cities by examining the town's sport. Through a detailed examination of local newspapers and archival sources, this book reveals the depth and diversity of the town's sporting culture. In particular, it illustrates the role of the middle classes in the development of clubs and the importance of class and social relations in determining an individual's access to sport. As a consequence, the study also relates how the town's working class populace was often excluded from the sporting culture and shows the lack of sporting opportunities available to women. Amateurism is explored through the initial rejection of professional football, but the book also demonstrates the increased popularity of the professional game during this period. In addition, in view of Middlesbrough's migrant population, the extent of football's role in forming and reinforcing local and regional identities will be examined.

Police in the Age of Improvement David Barrie, 2008-05 This book provides an in-depth analysis of the economic, social, intellectual, and political factors that shaped police reform, development, and policy in Scottish burghs during the Age of Improvement. In doing so, it moves beyond many of the problem-response interpretations which have preoccupied many police historians and locates reform within the wider contexts of urban improvement, municipal administration, and Scottish Enlightenment thought.

Handbook of Victims and Victimology Sandra Walklate, 2017-07-14 This second edition of the Handbook of Victims and Victimology presents a comprehensively revised and updated set of essays bringing together internationally recognised scholars and practitioners to offer substantial research-informed overviews within their specialist fields of investigation. This handbook is divided into five parts, with each part addressing a different theme within victimology. Part I offers a scene-setting exploration of new developments in the field, enduring issues that remain relatively unchanged, and the gaps and traps within the contemporary victimological agenda. Part II examines the complex dimensions to victim experiences as structured by gender, age, ethnicity, sexuality, and intersectionality. Part III reflects on the problems and possibilities of formulating policy responses in the light of the changing appreciation of the nature and extent of victimhood. Part IV is focused on the value of a comparative lens and the problems and possibilities of victim policies when seen through this lens, explored along three geographical axes: Europe, Australia, and Asia. Part V considers other ways of thinking about who counts as a victim and what counts as victimhood and extends the boundaries of the victimological imagination outward Building on the success of the previous edition this book provides an international focus on cutting edge issues in the field of victimology Including brand new chapters on intersectionality child victims sexuality hate crime and crimes of the powerful this handbook is essential reading for students and academics studying victims and victimology and an essential reference tool for those working within the victim support environment
