Advising Governments in the Westminster Tradition Jonathan Craft, John Halligan, 2020-11-05 In turbulent environments and unstable political contexts policy advisory systems have become more volatile The policy advisory system in Anglophone countries is composed of different types of advisers who have input into government decision making Government choices about who advises them varies widely as they demand contestability greater partisan input and more external consultation The professional advice of the public service may be disregarded The consequences for public policy are immense depending on whether a plurality of advice works effectively or is derailed by narrow and partisan agendas that lack an evidence base and implementation plans The book seeks to address these issues within a comparative country analysis of how policy advisory systems are constituted and how they operate in the age of instability in governance and major challenges with how the complexity policy issue can be handled

Social Citizenship in the Shadow of Competition Bronwen Morgan, 2017-11-30 Social Citizenship in the Shadow of Competition explores how economic concepts and tools are reshaping regulatory law Building on studies that link law both institutionally and discursively to the legitimation of economic neo liberalism the book charts lawmakers attempts to justify social welfare regulation in the language imposed by economic theory It presents new qualitative findings from an ambitious regulatory reform programme targeting over 1 700 pieces of legislation Bronwen Morgan argues that the interplay between economic discourse and lawmaking does not destroy the possibility of social citizenship however the subsequent regulatory conversations frequently silence or weaken the claims of vulnerable groups Thus even when vulnerable groups secure instrumental success economic conceptions of bureaucratic rationality impoverish their capacity to express certain kinds of intangible values and aspirations To expand or retain social citizenship requires that we learn to conceive of what matters in political economy without relying on the logic of utility or other instrumental rationalities

The Development of the Dutch Welfare State Robert Cox, 1993-10-15 The development of the Dutch welfare state in the Netherlands started later than in other Western European countries but once it started it grew at a spectacular rate The development was so rapid that it catapulted the Dutch from being welfare laggards to being welfare leaders Cox charts the course of this growth from the nineteenth century to the present placing the Dutch case within the larger theoretical discussion of welfare states In so doing Cox challenges the widely held assumption that welfare programs always represent the policies of the social democratic left He demonstrates that it was not the left but the more centrist religious parties that built the Dutch welfare state in the 1960s Even more curious is the fact that these same political forces had resisted the expansion of welfare programs throughout the first half of the twentieth century In many ways the Netherlands is a crucial test case for assumptions about the welfare state Its system is one of the largest in the world rivaling Sweden s as one that devotes the greatest share of public spending to social welfare How does it compare to other countries Do present theories of welfare state development fit the Dutch case What can we learn from the experience of a small state Cox makes a signal contribution in clarifying the historical record concerning a little studied country and in advancing theoretical debate
