Future? Brad Lockerbie, 2008-06-30 Do voters look to the past the future or both when deciding how to vote In Do Voters Look to the Future Brad Lockerbie shows voters to be more sophisticated than much of the work in political science would suggest He argues that voters do not simply reward or punish the incumbent administration but instead make a comparative evaluation of the likely performance of each candidate and vote for the one that will most likely provide them with a prosperous future Making use of data from 1956 through the present Lockerbie finds that voters take into account both what has happened and what they think will happen when they vote He finds these economic evaluations to be strongly related to voting behavior both for the House and the Senate as well as the presidency Additionally Lockerbie examines the role of these economic items to explain changes in party identification Political Science William J. Andrain, D.

Apter, 1994-12-19 This book probes three issues about the linkage between political protests and social change First why do individuals participate in protest activities including nonviolent movements and revolutions How do cultural beliefs sociopolitical structures personal attitudes motives and perceptions shape the decision to participate Second why do participants choose certain tactics Protesters use different types of tactics violent vs nonviolent public vs covert organized vs spontaneous and confrontation vs accommodation with other groups political parties and government agencies Most activists view a particular tactic as a useful means to attain their policy demands Third what policy consequences emerge from the activities of protest movements The book explores the impact of protests on social change and on the distribution of political power particularly greater access of subordinate groups to government policymakers A theory of political opportunities helps explain these issues about the origins activities and outcomes of protests
