Rosen Faar Afrika Roman:

Environment and Society in Roman North Africa Brent D. Shaw, 2024-12-11 The impact of a changing environment on human society and conversely the impact of man's activities upon the environment are important and contentious subjects today Climatic and environmental change have also been credited with bringing about major shifts in human history One such case is that of the decline of Roman North Africa and its conquest by the Arabs The evidence for this process is however far from clear cut and Professor Shaw's concern in these studies is firstly to re-examine what is known from both archaeological and written sources and how it has been interpreted work which has led to some substantial revisions of accepted accounts In the final three articles he turns to analyse how Roman society functioned on the edge of the desert and in particular to investigate the careful exploitation and control of critical water resources

Maize Cobs and Cultures: History of Zea mays L. John Staller,2009-12-02 Our perceptions and conceptions regarding the roles and importance of maize to ancient economies is largely a product of scientific research on the plant itself developed for the most part out of botanical research and its recent role as one of the most important economic staples in the world Anthropological research in the early part of the last century based largely upon the historical particularistic approach of the Boasian tradition provided the first evidence that challenged the assumptions about the economic importance of maize to sociocultural developments for scholars of prehistory Subsequent ethnobotanic and archaeological studies showed that the role of maize among Native American cultures was much more complex than just as a food staple In Maize Cobs and Cultures John Staller provides a survey of the ethnohistory and the scientific botanical and biological research of maize complemented by reviews on the ethnobotanic interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary methodologies
