Peter Paul Rubens' hunting scenes have been known for their energy and level of detail in the animals portrayed. His paintings of exotic animals demonstrate his skill in rendering subjects he may not have seen in the wild. Rubens drew from animal lore, etchings, zoological texts, taxidermy specimens, and royal zoos to give his animals a sense of realism. His animals possess emotive qualities which are generally not found in hunting scenes previous to the baroque period. This study will explore Rubens' use of exotic and domestic animals, their roles in the composition, each animal's iconography in the history of western art, and their relationship to their hunters. Six hunting scenes created by Rubens will be examined with these parameters in mind. This thesis includes recent scholarship on Rubens' hunting scenes, which focus on the sources of Rubens' painted animals and their iconographical representations in the history of western art.      Corpus Rubenianum Ludwig Burchard, Arnout Balis, 1986
