Falvo, 2005 A comprehensive text that provides easy to understand explanations of medical aspects of common chronic illnesses and disabilities. Economic Implications of Chronic Illness and Disability in Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet Union Cem Mete, 2008-01-01

A significant portion of the population in the Eastern Europe and Central Asia region are either in poor health or disabled. This research shows that the linkages between disability and economic and social outcomes of interest tend to be stronger in transition countries when compared with industrialized countries. Reasons for this trend include the prevalence of a large informal sector in many developing countries, relatively weak targeting performance of social assistance programs especially in poor transition countries, and unavailability of broad based insurance mechanisms to protect individuals against loss of income due to unexpected illness. Harry T. Reis, Susan Sprecher, 2009-03-15 Library Journal Best Reference 2009 An excellent gateway to further examination of any of the subdisciplines of relationship science or as a research tool in its own right. Library Journal Relationships are fundamental to nearly all domains of human activity from birth to death. When people participate in healthy satisfying relationships they live, work and learn more effectively. When relationships are distressed or dysfunctional people are less happy, less healthy and less productive. Few aspects of human experience have as broad or as deep effects on our lives. The Encyclopedia of Human Relationships offers an interdisciplinary view of all types of human associations: friends, lovers, spouses, roommates, coworkers, teammates, parents and children, cousins, siblings, acquaintances, neighbors, business associates, and so forth. Although each of these connections is unique in some respect, they share a common core of principles and processes. These three volumes provide a state of the art review of the extensive theories, concepts and empirical findings.

Seminar paper from the year 2018 in the subject Medicine Anatomy Physiology Cytology grade 1 Egerton University language English abstract Over the past decades scientific inquiry into the phenomenon of aging has produced extensive literature Of great fascination is the mechanism that underlies aging process From a biological perspective aging takes a life course when an individual grows to maturity During this phase in life aging is not felt as a remarkable biological course due to the excitement that occurs during young age However the ageing coincides with explicit biological changes especially the aspect of physical decline It is this phase of ageing that has attracted the interests of both scientists and gerontologists Scientists are focused on understanding the biology of aging Biological studies indicate that ageing involves biological pathways such as the regulation of genes metabolism and cellular signaling Lopez et al 2013 Newgard Pessin 2014 These pathways play integral roles in controlling how the human body works including response to infection stress as well as recovery from injuries On the other hand gerontologists are concerned with the aspects of aging in order to distinguish normal aging from disease The task here involves establishing a clear boundary between normal aging and age related health problems which have for long been considered as part of aging For instance the association of change in personality especially during old age has been found to be an independent construct that does not have a significant relationship with normal ageing National Institute of Health 2015 In this respect this paper provides a critical discussion on aspects of normal ageing when combined with a chronic disease may contribute to the development of disability iatrogenic illness and geriatric syndromes as well as elucidating the nurse's role in limiting this risk This topic has immense implications to clinical practice Foremost ageing is associated with chronic illnesses Additionally some aspects of ageing exhibit interplay with chronic illnesses to cause devastating health consequences such as disability iatrogenic illness and geriatric syndromes Therefore nursing care should focus on addressing chronic illnesses as well as preventing the development of disability iatrogenic illness and geriatric syndromes As such this essay discusses how the combination of normal ageing aspects with chronic illnesses may lead to these adverse health conditions using the case of diabetes
