She Must Have Known The Trial Of Rosemary West:

She Must Have Known Brian Masters, 1997 Frederick West cheated everybody when he hung himself on New Year's Day 1995 Was this a sign of overwhelming guilt Was West criminally insane or merely a sexual sadist of the worst kind Brian Masters sets out to answer these questions Attending the Rosemary West trial on a daily basis Masters has come up with a penetrating study of the sexual obsession that led to the measured killing of twelve women and girls In the wake of the horrific detail of murder sadism and torture that has come to light in the last few months Masters from his privileged courtroom vantage point looks closely at how and why ordinary human beings were driven to serial killing of the most devious kind and how an evil psychopath was able to ensnare so many in a web of unseeing complicity He unravels with particular precision the legal means used to bring the whole matter to trial and weighs the evidence coolly and objectively Brian Masters has established his reputation as an authority on the criminal and psychopathic mind This is his highly reasoned and psychologically acute look at what has become Britain's serial killer trial of the century

The Subject of Murder Lisa Downing, 2024-05-31 The subject of murder has always held a particular fascination for us But since at least the nineteenth century we have seen the murderer as different from the ordinary citizen a special individual like an artist or a genius who exists apart from the moral majority a sovereign self who obeys only the destructive urge sometimes even commanding cult followings In contemporary culture we continue to believe that there is something different and exceptional about killers but is the murderer such a distinctive type Are they degenerate beasts or supermen as they have been depicted on the page and the screen Or are murderers something else entirely In The Subject of Murder Lisa Downing explores the ways in which the figure of the murderer has been made to signify a specific kind of social subject in Western modernity Drawing on the work of Foucault in her studies of the lives and crimes of killers in Europe and the United States Downing interrogates the meanings of media and texts produced about and by murderers Upending the usual treatment of murderers as isolated figures or exceptional individuals Downing argues that they are ordinary people reflections of our society at the intersections of gender agency desire and violence
