Understanding Predator-prey Interactions Lisa Teckentrup, 2019* Analysis of vertebrate predator-prey community

Vadim Sidorovich, 2011-09-01 This monograph is about predation in vertebrate animal community The studies were done in the seminatural terrains with transitional mixed forest within the European forest zone in Belarus The result part was organised as a top down flow First the community characteristics related to predators were estimated I presented data on predator species richness population density and biomass with special attention paid to the changes in predator species diversity occurred during the last two centuries and particularly in connection with the American mink and raccoon dog naturalization Then the main features of predator food niches were given and the structure of various predator guilds and size structure in predators were analysed The next part of the monograph was devoted to examining of community important factors acting in semi natural terrains Such factors affected either the whole community or its marked fragment The last quite a large part of the monograph consisted of many chapters which present more or less essential results on different predator species and stresses hot questions of their population ecology Multiple Attractors, Catastrophes and Chaos statutory authority National Science Foundation Act of 1950 as amended the NSF is directed to both initiate and support basic scientific research In its Ecology Program one mode of initiating research is to encourage the development of new ideas through advisory workshops The NSF is specifically directed to strengthen our nation's research potential In addition stimulating new approaches to research will continue to be prominent in the coming years as federal attention is given to increasing the innovativeness and competitiveness of the U S in science and engineering A decision to initiate a workshop does not arise de novo in the Ecology Program Rather it emerges from panel discussions conversations with investigators at meetings or on the phone and from discussions between program officers in the Division of Biotic Systems and Resources This workshop was developed to provide advice to the NSF and the lim nological community Some NSF perceptions on future funding for ecological research on lake communities are presented here Researchers often mentioned a paucity of innovative lake ecology at the community level This perception was accompanied by a certain frustration since lakes probably have the best empirical data base of any natural environment and should continue to lead in the development of ecological concepts Members of NSF advisory panels sometimes expressed similar concerns during consideration of proposals for lake research

Community Ecology Herman A. Verhoef, Peter J. Morin, 2010 Community ecology is the study of the interactions between populations of co existing species Co edited by two prominent community ecologists and featuring contributions from top researchers in the field this book provides a survey of the state of the art in both the theory and applications of the discipline It pays special attention to topology dynamics and the importance of spatial and temporal scale while also looking at applications to emerging problems in human dominated ecosystems including the restoration and reconstruction of viable communities Community Ecology Processes Models and Applications adopts a mainly theoretical approach and focuses on the use of network based theory which remains little explored in standard community ecology textbooks The book includes discussion of the effects of biotic invasions on natural communities the linking of ecological network structure to empirically measured community properties and dynamics the effects of evolution on community patterns and processes and the integration of fundamental interactions into ecological networks A final chapter indicates future research directions for the discipline

Resource Competition and Community Structure David Tilman, 2020-03-31 One of the central questions of ecology is why there are so many different kinds of plants and animals Here David Tilman presents a theory of how organisms compete for resources and the way their competition promotes diversity Developing Hutchinson's suggestion that the main cause of diversity is the feeding relations of species this book builds a mechanistic resource based explanation of the structure and functioning of ecological communities In a detailed analysis of the Park Grass Experiments at the Rothamsted Experimental Station in England the author demonstrates that the dramatic results of these 120 years of experimentation are consistent with his theory as are observations in many other natural communities The consumer resource approach of this book is applicable to both animal and plant communities but the majority of Professor Tilman's discussion concentrates on the structure of plant communities All theoretical arguments are developed graphically and formal mathematics is kept to a minimum The final chapters of the book provide some testable speculations about resources and animal communities and explore such problems as the evolution of super species the differences between plant and animal community diversity patterns and the cause of plant succession

Evolutionary Community Ecology Mark A. McPeck, 2017-08-29 Evolutionary Community Ecology develops a unified framework for understanding the structure of ecological communities and the dynamics of natural selection that shape the evolution of the species inhabiting them All species engage in interactions with many other species and these interactions regulate their abundance define their trajectories of natural selection and shape their movement decisions Mark McPeck synthesizes the ecological and evolutionary dynamics generated by species interactions that structure local biological communities and regional metacommunities McPeck explores the ecological performance characteristics needed for invasibility and coexistence of species in complex networks of species interactions This species interaction framework is then extended to examine the ecological dynamics of natural selection that drive coevolution of interacting species in these complex interaction networks The models of natural selection resulting from species interactions are used to evaluate the ecological conditions that foster diversification at multiple trophic levels Analyses show that diversification depends on the ecological context in which species interactions occur and the types of traits that define the mechanisms of those species interactions Lastly looking at the mechanisms of speciation that affect species richness and diversity at various spatial scales and the consequences of past climate change over the Quaternary period McPeck considers how metacommunity structure is shaped at regional and biogeographic scales Integrating evolutionary theory into the study of community ecology Evolutionary Community Ecology provides a new framework for predicting how communities are organized and how they may change over time

Population and Community Ecology for Insect Management and Conservation Johann Baumgartner, Pietro Brandmayr, Bryan F.J. Manly, 2020-03-09 One of the themes of the 20th International Congress of Entomology held in Florence in August 1996 was Ecology and Population Dynamics with papers presented on single species dynamics population interactions and community ecology This book contains a selection of the papers that were presented and gives a late 1990s picture of the latest research in this fast developing area
