The Late Archaic across the Borderlands Bradley J. Vierra, 2010-01-01 Why and when human societies shifted from nomadic hunting and gathering to settled agriculture engages the interest of scholars around the world One of the most fruitful areas in which to study this issue is the North American Southwest where Late Archaic inhabitants of the Sonoran and Chihuahuan Deserts of Mexico Arizona and New Mexico turned to farming while their counterparts in Trans Pecos and South Texas continued to forage By investigating the environmental biological and cultural factors that led to these differing patterns of development we can identify some of the necessary conditions for the rise of agriculture and the corresponding evolution of village life The twelve papers in this volume synthesize previous and ongoing research and offer new theoretical models to provide the most up to date picture of life during the Late Archaic from 3 000 to 1 500 years ago across the entire North American Borderlands Some of the papers focus on specific research topics such as stone tool technology and mobility patterns Others study the development of agriculture across whole regions within the Borderlands The two concluding papers trace pan regional patterns in the adoption of farming and also link them to the growth of agriculture in other parts of the world

Duff, 2016-12-15 Identifying distinct social groups of the past has always challenged archaeologists because understanding how people perceived their identity is critical to the reconstruction of social organization Material culture has been the standard measure of distinction between groups and the distribution of ceramics and other artifacts has often been used to define group boundaries Western Pueblo Identities argues that such an approach is not always appropriate demographic and historical factors may affect the extent to which material evidence can define such boundaries Andrew Duff now examines a number of other factors relationships among settlement size regional population densities the homogeneity of material culture and local and long distance exchange in order to trace the history of interaction and the formation of group identity in east central Arizona and west central New Mexico from A D 1275 to 1400 Using comparative data from the Upper Little Colorado and Zuni regions Duff demonstrates differences in patterns of interaction within and between regions with different population densities He then links these differences to such factors as occupational history immigrant populations the negotiation of social identities and the emergence of new ritual systems Following abandonments in the Four Corners area in the late 1200s immigrants with different historical backgrounds occupied many Western Pueblo regions in contrast to the Hopi and Zuni regions which had more stable populations and deeper historical roots Duff uses chemical analyses of ceramics to document exchange among several communities within these regions showing that people in less densely settled regions were actively recruited by residents of the Hopi and Zuni regions to join their settlements By the time of the arrival of the Spaniards two distinct social and territorial groups the Hopi and Zuni peoples had emerged from this scattering of communities Duff s new interpretations along with new data on ceramic exchange patterns suggest that interaction is a better way to measure identity than more commonly used criteria His work offers new perspectives on the role of ritual in social organization and on identity formation in Pueblo IV society and is rich in implications for the study of other sedentary middle range societies
