

PRELUDE TO GENOCIDE

1582 The Ottoman-Ottomans (followers of Osman, a Turkish tribal chief), take control of the historical lands of Armenians.

1582-1622 Safavid rulers of Persia conquer Eastern Armenia.

1574-1577 Ottomans consolidate their rule in Western Armenia.

1588 Ottomans occupy the Khamsa of Yerevan and control it by defeating the Safavid Persians.

1606-1630 Shah Abbas defeats the Ottomans and recaptures the region of Tabriz and large parts of Eastern Armenia. A peace treaty between the Ottomans and Persia recognizes the partition of Armenia.

1627 Russian Cossacks complete their conquest of the Caucasian Eastern Armenia falls under Russian rule.

1639 Russo-Turkish war. The Treaty of Turkmenchay further divides Armenia and puts it under the three spheres of control: Russian, Persian and Turkish.

1686-1692 Constantinian troops imposed on Armenians drive thousands of Zeytoun to civil disobedience. Ottoman troops used to subdue the population. Ministry of the Armenians spreads to the regions surrounding the city of Van and elsewhere.

1696-1700 widespread spreading of the Armenian Diaspora. Armenians in the US Government to take political action in addition to providing humanitarian aid to the victims of Turkish atrocities.

1678 Second wave of massacres in Zeytoun.

1678 Conversion of Sultan Abdul-Hamid.

1677 Under European pressure, Ottoman rulers incorporate the first Turkish Parliament.

1679 Russian forces occupy most of the Western Armenian territories. The Treaty of San Stefano is negotiated between Russia and the Ottomans.

France and England force the Russians to negotiate the terms of the San Stefano treaty, leading to new terms introduced in the Treaty of Berlin.

1686-1692 Loss of Ottoman control of the Balkans and resulting income of the Empire further deteriorates. Armenians in Constantinople and elsewhere in the Ottoman Empire are persecuted. Armenians from the lost territories into Armenian lands leads to increasing land usurpation and wide spread abuses.

1697 Sultan Hamid initiates the formation of the Janissary troops. Recruited from the ranks of Kurdish nomadic tribes, these regiments soon become instruments of terror used against Armenians.

1694-1696 Second massacres of Sipsosun. Another series of massacres in the city of Van and its surrounding villages spreads to other parts of Turkish Armenia.

1695 Previously referred to as Ermenistan (Armenia) in Ottoman times, Armenian lands under the new administrative structure used to six vilayets.

1696 Massacre of Armenians living in Constantinople.

1694 Usurpation of private property and excessive taxation leads to a rebellion by Armenians in Samsun. Regular army units and Hamid's troops take part in the ensuing destruction of Armenian towns and villages.

1698 Young Turks overthrow the Sultan. Committee of Union and Progress takes control of the Empire.

1699 An effort to overthrow the Young Turk regime and restore the Sultan is foiled in April. Within a few days, over 30,000 Armenians are massacred in Adana and other parts of Cilician Armenia.

1699 In January, Talat and Enver assassinate the Minister of War, Nazim Pasha, and the Grand Vizier, Mahmud Shevket Pasha. With the death of the old and conservative wing of the Young Turk party, a new conservative wing of Enver Pasha, Talat Pasha and Ahmed Riza Pasha assume total control of the dwindling Empire.

Negotiation to transfer control of the Six Armenian Vilayets (regions) to European governments is initiated between the Young Turks and the European powers.

The "Forgotten Genocide"

For years now, the identity, politics and culture of the Armenians dispersed around the world have been dominated by the efforts to re-assert the world of the truth of a single event - the Genocide of 1915. This monolithic vision is the result of an outrageous Turkish denial of the crime.

At present, there is no objective history of the Ottoman Empire related to the Genocide. Current Turkish academic discourse - claims that the Ottoman administration and society were "benighted" and "backward", in contradiction to historical fact.

When the Treaty of Lausanne in 1923 finalized the geographical boundaries of the Republic of Turkey, Kemal Ataturk, first leader of Turkey, embarked on the creation of a new identity for the Turks. A Turkish Imperial "national" constitution was founded, and in 1932 Türk Tarih Tezi (Turkish Historical Thesis) was officially endorsed and turned into an official state dogma. It claims that the history of the Turkish Nation is not limited to Ottoman times, but extends that Turkey was the firstborn of the nations of Mesopotamia, Anatolia, Egypt and the Aegean, as well. Turkish scholars claim that even Homer was a Turk.

While the Türk Tarih Tezi was approved by Ataturk, one of the first academics in the West was an academic by the name of Edward Lewis. In an interdisciplinary article of the English language edition, Mr. Lewis, with Islamic logic, wrote: "It would be a great error to decide this [Türk Tarih Tezi] as the whims of an autocrat. Ataturk was too great of a man to organize an elaborate campaign of this sort out of mere caprice, or out of desire for national self-identification. One of the reasons for the campaign was to provide some comfort for Turkish national self-respect, which has been sadly undermined during the last century or two."

In this context, the continued Turkish denial becomes explicable, if not acceptable.

MASSACRES IN ARMENIA

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. (UPI) - A MAJOR PROSECUTION CASE HAS BEEN OPENED BY THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE AGAINST THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT FOR THE MASSACRES IN ARMENIA IN 1915.

These Turkish soldiers are seen here leading Armenians to the death camps in the mountains of Armenia. The Armenians were killed by the Turkish soldiers in the mountains of Armenia.

From San Stefano to Berlin

While acknowledging the brutal policies of the Ottomans towards the Armenian population and the necessity of implementing radical reforms, article 16 of the Treaty of San Stefano provided for Russian troops to remain in the Armenian provinces until the Turkish government carried out reforms and stopped the activities of the Kurds and Circassians who were terrorizing the Armenians.

In exchange for the control of Cyprus by the British, and recognition of Tunis by the French, both under Ottoman rule, the French and the British promised to "protect" Turkey against the Russians. Paragraph 64 of the Treaty of Berlin called for the removal of Russian troops from Western Armenia and substituted the need for reforms by a collective European "responsibility". Immediately afterwards, Sultan Abdul Hamid ordered a new round of massacres.

The Riots in Constantinople

"... Amid the crowd in the streets which had quickly collected were women, girls of Mississimians and Kurds armed with daggers, iron staves or clubs, and acting under the leadership of such persons, who were evidently Sultan. These gangs which were composed of Armenians, but other attacks during the night were made by the Armenians. The Armenians were killed by the Turkish soldiers in the mountains of Armenia.

Ottoman Taxation System

In the empire, taxation was regulated by the Sultan. A designated treasurer and private financiers. At the conclusion of the negotiations, the financiers paid the Sultan and, in return, negotiated with a host of subcontractors. Since most civil servants and army officers received only symbolic pay (if any) from the government, they became the enforcers of a "Taxation System" that was in reality blackmail and extortion. Armenian towns and villages had often to deal with three or more separate "tax collectors" simultaneously.

ANOTHER ARMENIAN HOLOCAUST Five Villages Burned, Five Thousand Persons Made Homeless, and Anti-Christians Organized

London, Sept. 9. - The daily news will tomorrow publish a dispatch from Kars, stating that fresh outrages have been perpetrated in the European district.

A band of brigands attacked a company of Turkish gendarmes on Aug. 12, killing a Sergeant. Therefore, the Turkish authorities were thinking very properly, decided that the assailants were Armenian revolutionaries from Kars, who intended to release exiled Armenians who are still in prison at Kars.

A force of 1,000 Turkish troops was sent to Kars, and five villages were pillaged. Five thousand persons were rendered homeless. Men, women, and children were tortured. Four monasteries were sacked.

It is reported that the Turkish military officials have formed an anti-Christian society, to consider Christians if the Porte accepts the scheme of reforms the powers insist upon.

The Ottoman Empire: Myths & Realities

Ottoman society at its inception was an amalgamation of Tatar, Mongol and Seljuk tribes that originated in Central Asia and settled in Asia Minor between the 11th and 13th centuries. Through military conquest, they subjugated the indigenous population comprised of Armenians, Greeks, Kurds, Assyrians and Arabs. By 1452, the Byzantine center, Constantinople, fell to the invaders, who later came to be known as the Ottomans.

While other Empires promulgated their own administrative, cultural and religious values among their subjugated peoples, the Ottomans borrowed from their Islamic roots, adopting Islam as the official state religion and forcing their Christianity to adopt their own version of Islam.

Untrue to Turkish Islam is use of the term Genovar (infidel). Eventually, this designation served as the primary basis upon which the empire was governed. A Genovar was a non-Muslim who was forbidden to ride a horse, possess a weapon or wear the color green. In courts, the testimony of a Genovar was inadmissible. Another obligation of a Genovar was the handing over of a portion of his wealth to the authorities to be arbitrarily taxed and used to "defend" the empire.

European captives of Ottoman armies are shown in an early 17th century engraving.

The Adana Massacres of 1909

On April 13, 1909, the province of Adana, governed by a corrupt and fanatical Pasha, was the scene of terrible massacres resulting in the death of over thirty thousand Armenians, as well as the destruction of their economic base. No one was punished for these crimes.

"Space will not permit me to write in detail of the mass, who were crucified, thrown into the sea, and killed in the churches or in their houses, and of the many who were tortured and killed in such hideous and awful ways that I dare not here repeat. But it is estimated that on the night of Adana between twenty and thirty thousand were slain and months later the plain was strewn with their bones."

Rose Lambert, American Association of Friends of the Armenians, and the Armenian Massacres.
