forefront of the then nascent spatial turn in the humanities Towards the River's Mouth is a key text of what in recent years has been variously termed literary cartography literary geography and spatial poetics Its call to carefully and affectionately examine our surroundings while attempting to step back from habitual ways of perceiving and moving through space has resonated as much with literary scholars and other writers as with geographers and architects By now a classic of twentieth century Italian literature it has in recent years garnered increasing attention especially with the growth of ecocriticism and new materialism within the environmental humanities This edition translated into English for the first time features an introduction that places Towards the River's Mouth in the context of Celati's other work and a selection of ten scholarly essays by prominent figures in comparative literature and Italian studies
