London in Cinema Charlotte Brunsdon,2019-07-25 Charlotte Brunsdon s illuminating study explores the variety of cinematic Londons that appear in films made since 1945 Brunsdon traces the familiar ways that film makers establish that a film is set in London by use of recognisable landmarks and the city's shorthand iconography of red buses and black taxis as well as the ways in which these icons are avoided. She looks at London weather fog and rain and everyday locations like the pub and the housing estate while also examining the recurring patterns of representation associated with films set in the East and West Ends of London from Spring in Park Lane 1948 to Mona Lisa 1986 and from Night and the City 1950 to From Hell 2001. Brunsdon provides a detailed analysis of a selection of films exploring their contribution to the cinematic geography of London and showing the ways in which feature films have responded to and created changing views of the city. She traces London's transformation from imperial capital to global city through the different ways in which the local is imagined in films ranging from Ealing comedies to Pressure 1974 as well as through the shifting imagery of the River Thames and the Docks. She addresses the role of cinematic genres such as horror and film noir in the constitution of the cinematic city as well as the recurrence of figures such as the cockney, the gangster and the housewife. Challenging the view that London is not a particularly cinematic city, Brunsdon demonstrates that many London set films offer their own meditation on the complex relationships between the cinema and the city.

Farming was the basis of the wealth that made England worth invading twice in the eleventh century while trade and manufacturing were insignificant by modern standards. In Anglo Saxon Farms and Farming the authors employ a wide range of evidence to investigate how Anglo Saxon farmers produced the food and other agricultural products that sustained English economy, society and culture before the Norman Conquest. The first part of the volume draws on written and pictorial sources, archaeology, place names and the history of the English language to discover what crops and livestock people raised and what tools and techniques were used to produce them. In part two, using a series of landscape studies, place names, maps and the landscape itself, the authors explore how these techniques might have been combined into working agricultural regimes in different parts of the country. A picture emerges of an agriculture that changed from an essentially prehistoric state in the sub-Roman period to what was recognisably the beginning of a tradition that only ended with the Second World War. Anglo Saxon farming was not only sustainable but infinitely adaptable to different soils and geology and to a climate changing as unpredictably as it is today.
